Farms said secure as TMI vents

BY PAT KAUFFMAN

LITITZ — Officials at Three Mile Island nuclear plant have scheduled Krypton venting for next weekend, and so far the public in this state and surrounding states appears to be calm. Farmers are not expected to encounter any hassles from the venting.

While farmers felt the brunt of public sentiment during the TMI crisis with customers in Maryland and New Jersey turning away from Pennsylvania produced milk and products temporarily, there is no sign that this will happen during next weekend's venting procedure.

Boyd Gartley, director of member and public relations for Inter-State Milk Producers, said the Co-op routinely tests the milk it receives. He said that there was no significant rise in the test during the TMI crisis, and that since Krypton is a noble gas, it will not enter the food chain and therefore should not show up in the milk.

Gartley also said that milk routinely gets the brunt of public sentiment, because it is monitored for radioactivity. But he said, it is the only product produced fresh daily so it provides the most ready medium for testing.

Al Zimmerman from Quality Control Labs, which handles the testing for Inter-State, said that right now the lab is only performing routine tests, and that during the venting, they will consult with the state.

Extra tests will only be run if the state advises QC it is necessary. Zimmerman said he did not expect this to happen.

Dairy farmers near TMI have received no word of extra testing procedures. Mrs. E. Wayne Beshore whose family operates a dairy farm within the 5 mile radius of the plant said that while their dairy and the state and federal governments collected samples for months after TMI, it is not aware of any intention to collect samples during the Krypton venting.

Tony Evans from the Maryland Department of Agriculture said he doesn't anticipate any consumer resistance in his state. He noted that they've been testing milk for over 30 years and know more about it than almost any other product.

He did mention one phone call recently from a consumer concerned about the venting and he said he suspects there may be others like her but that he has not had any calls from them.

Some hope for Farmland shippers

Eastern members move to shake up management

BY CURT HARLER

TROY — Members of Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative, apparantly seeking a brighter future under their new president, have mounted a campaign, complete with advertising, to clean up the Co-op's operations.

The main battle is going to be over Arden Tewksbury's continued employment at Eastern.

Meanwhile, independents told by Eastern to join the Co-op or lose their market found the first breaks in a solid wall of northeastern dairies who maintain they have no room for more members or more milk. Two other co-ops have said they would be willing to talk with the Farmland shippers looking for an alternative to Eastern.

Focus of the Eastern members' advertising program is the Eastern Board of Directors which meets Tuesday, June 24.

Ads appear this week in a number of farm and local rural newspapers urging Eastern members to demand "new management and cleanup of all operations."

As Co-op President Stanley Korona explained, Tewksbury served his limit of nine years as a Board member. Now, Co-op General Manager Howard McDonald has hired Tewksbury as Assistant to the General Manager at a reported $30,000 a year.

A resolution to limit McDonald's power to hire ex-officials of the Co-op was defeated at Eastern's annual meeting earlier this month.

But a number of members say they resent Tewksbury's extended term in power, and thus the first lines are drawn in the battle to turn Eastern around.

The advertising, paid for out of the pockets of individual Eastern members,

Pseudorabies bars breeding swine from shows

BY SHEILA MILLER

HARRISBURG — Pseudorabies, the contagious disease that has been cropping up in Southeastern Pennsylvania, has affected the state's breeding swine herds in a way similar to the cholera outbreak several years ago, said John Henkel, Strasburg, director of the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council.

Henkel was referring to the fact that the state's Department of Agriculture has recommended that breeding swine classes be curtailed until February, 1981.

This recommendation, which was sent out to all county fair associations on June 12, was the result of a meeting held on May 30 between the swine producers and the state government.

The producers and officials met to discuss the pseudorabies problem in the state, and what effect it could have on the show and fair season.

The producers were represented by Clyde McConaughy, Smicksburg; Clayton Weinbart, Rochester Mills: John Henkel, Strasburg; Ken Fetterolf, Centre Hall; Reno Thomas, Beavertown; and Dennis Grumbine, Myerstown.

According to Grumbine, president of the Pa. Cooperative Swine Breeders Association, there were "ump-teen many doctors from PDA, Penn State and USDA" present at the meeting, too.

Max A. Van Buskirk, Jr., V.M.D., who heads PDA's Bureau of Animal Industry, was there along with several other veterinarians.

Grumbine noted there were also representatives of the dairy industry there. He mentioned that they were concerned about the disease infecting the cattle exhibited at fairs where hogs carrying pseudorabies might be exhibited, too.

"They have a right to be concerned," added Grumbine, "because cattle don't usually make it through the disease—for cattle it's a sure death."

Blue mold sporulation found

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

LANDISVILLE — Blue mold sporulation, the first really visible sign of the fungus on tobacco plants and the stage at which it can spread and reproduce, has been detected in Lancaster County.

The grey-blue discoloration on the underside of leaves was found this week in a seedbed in the Leola-Leacock area by Arnold Lueck, county extension agent. Presence of the fungus was confirmed by John O. Yocum, agronomist and tobacco researcher at the Penn State Southeast Research Lab, Landisville.

The blue mold was found on plants left in a seedbed after transplanting had been completed. No field evidence has as yet been found.

"It is a time that growers must remain vigilant," Lueck emphasized.

"We recommend that they follow three important practices.

"If transplanting is not completed, continue to spray the seedbeds until the transplanting is finished entirely.

"As soon as transplanting is completed, turn the seedbeds under.

"Finally, keep a close eye on fields for any visible evidence of blue mold."

Both Lueck and Yocum stressed that blue mold could "explode" in the fields if certain weather conditions all come together to provide an atmosphere suitable for its growth and spread.

Continued cool, cloudy weather, coupled with the addition of a moisture film over a few day's period would be ideal for blue mold. While temperatures have been cool, the bright, sunny days and relatively dry

12 infected swine herds confirmed in 4-county area

MYERSTOWN — Two more Lebanon County swine herds were found to be infected with pseudorabies this week.

This brings the number of infected herds in the four-county area of Lancaster, Lebanon, Berks and Dauphin to 12, according to Dr. John W. Cable, Chief of the Pennsylvania Agricultural Department's Swine Health Division.

In addition, a thirteenth herd is under quarantine due to exposure to the disease.

The two new confirmed cases in Lebanon County involve neighboring herds to the original infected herd in the Myerstown area, Dr. Cable said.

Besides the three Lebanon County cases, there are single infections diagnosed in Dauphin and Berks and seven in Lancaster County currently. The infected Lancaster County herds are concentrated in the Ephrata-East Earl section of the northern part of the county.

Thus far, no common denominator has been found to indicate the original source of the disease, Dr. Cable explained.

"We still have the three different, separate groups that were diagnosed as original cases in the outbreak," Dr. Cable explained.

"We haven't been able to find any cross-links so far between these original cases in Dauphin, Lebanon and Lancaster counties.

"The other confirmed

Hog market brightens producers' outlooks

BY SHEILA MILLER

LITITZ — Hog producers this week are in high spirits. For the first time in a long while, the prices they received for their market hogs were up close to 40 cents.

Like Pennsylvania Pork Producer Council's president Abe Fisher, Kinzers, said, "We're not making any money yet, but we're not losing as much as we were before."

Fisher attributes the better hog market to the number of hogs killed falling under the 350,000 per day level.

"On Thursday, the kill was down to 341,000," he said "The supply of hogs has seemed to drop off."

This improvement, however, may be short lived

Fisher attributed the lower supply being the result of the recent good weather "When the days are cool and the hogs are growing well, the market is kept cleared out.

"But if we get two weeks of real hot weather, and the hogs don't gain fast enough, we'll see a lot more hogs coming on to the market at the same time."

Henry Gruber, chief of livestock procurement for A & B Packing, Allentown, echoed Fisher's theory. He also noted there just were the number of hogs moving through the sale barns.

"When the supply of hogs drops, and these packers are set up for the big kill, the buyers fight for the hogs available—that means higher prices."

Despite the fact that there is an almost sure drop in hog prices lurking on the horizon, Fisher said the better prices this week are "tremendous".

"We hog producers are smiling from ear to ear," he concluded

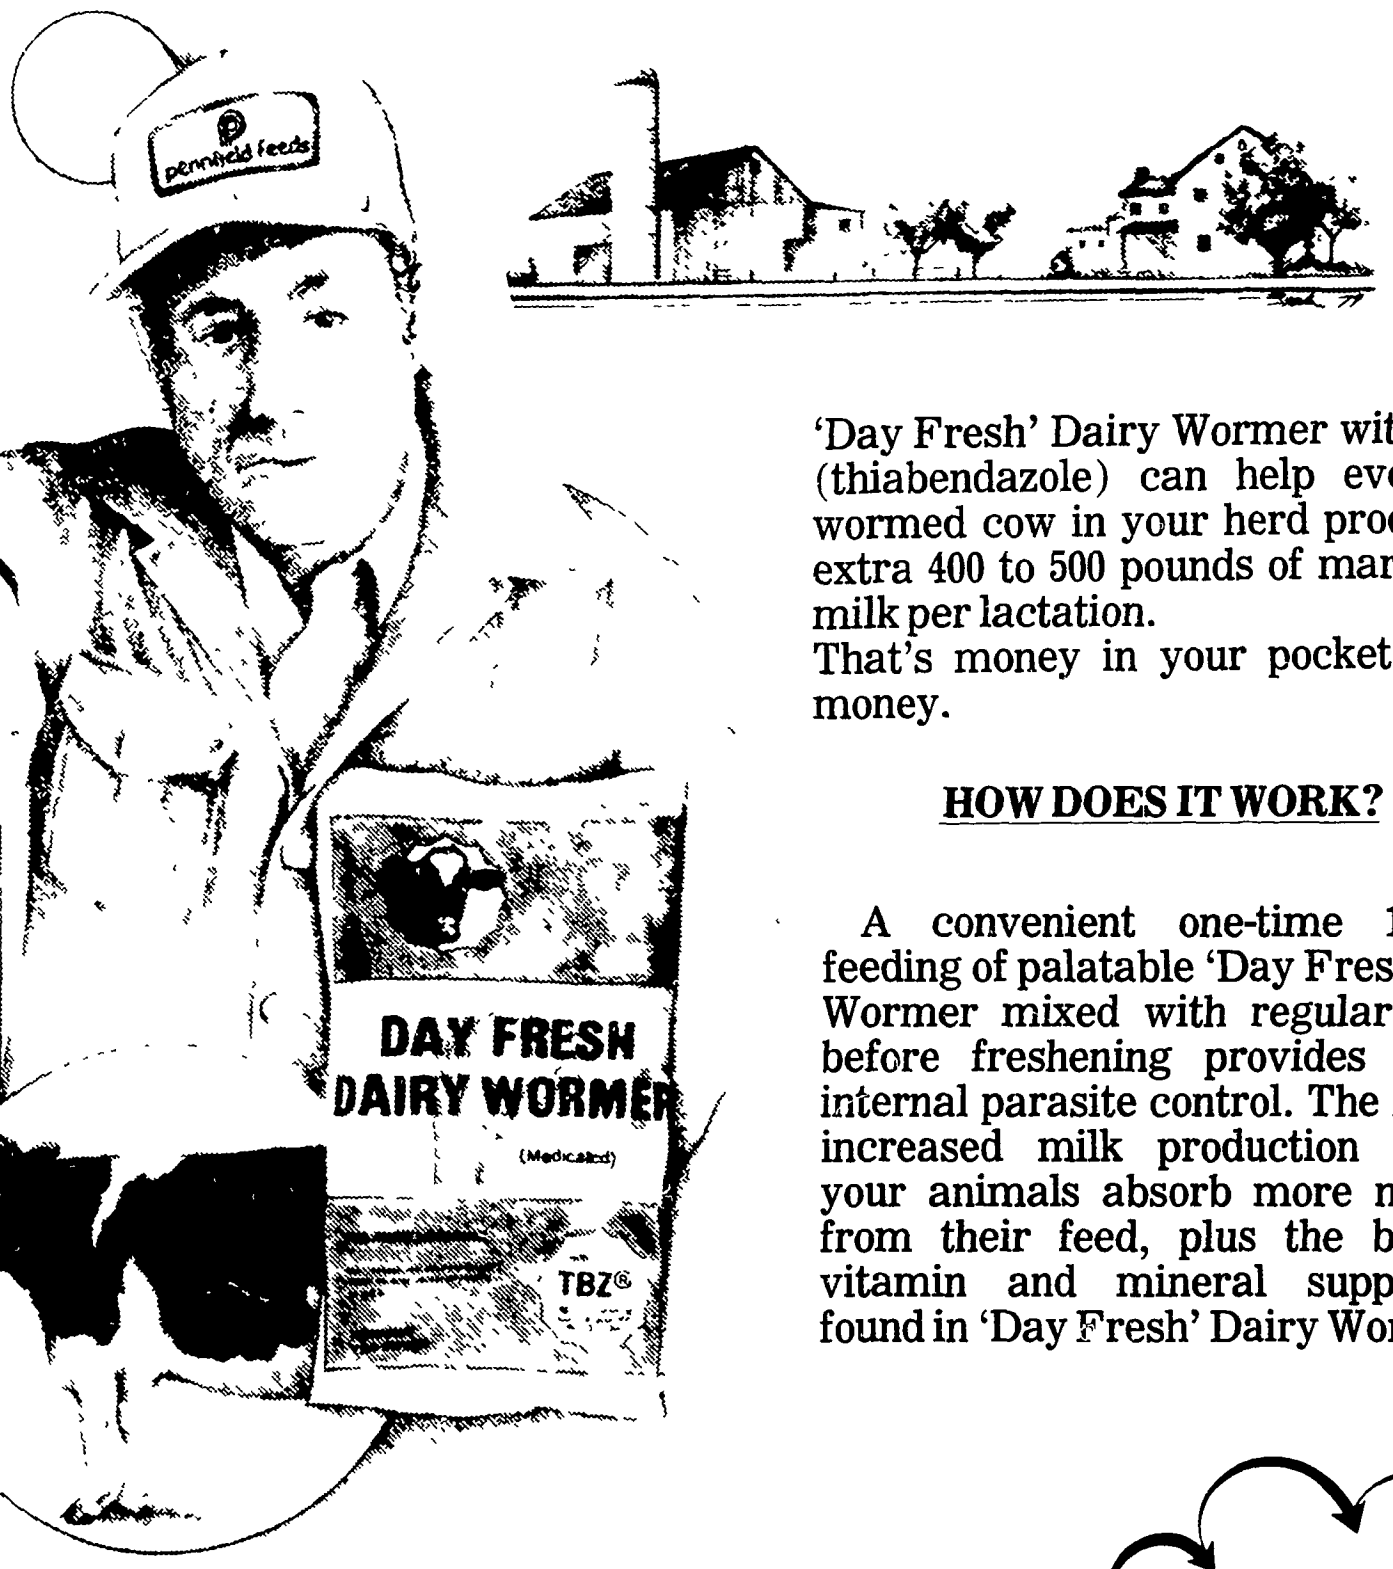
'Day Fresh' Dairy Wormer means extra milk, and extra milk means extra profit for you.



'Day Fresh' Dairy Wormer with TBZ® (thiabendazole) can help every unwormed cow in your herd produce an extra 400 to 500 pounds of marketable milk per lactation.
That's money in your pocket. Extra money.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

A convenient one-time 14.4 oz. feeding of palatable 'Day Fresh' Dairy Wormer mixed with regular rations before freshening provides positive internal parasite control. The result is increased milk production because your animals absorb more nutrients from their feed, plus the bonus of vitamin and mineral supplements found in 'Day Fresh' Dairy Wormer.

AVAILABLE NOW AT SAVINGS!

Right now you can save $2.50 on each case of ten 14.4 oz. packets of Pennfield's 'Day Fresh' Dairy Wormer with TBZ® . The bright orange 'Day Fresh' foil pouch — which prevents spoilage — is your sign that extra milk profits are on the way.

SAVE $2.50 per Case of 10 of Pennfield's 'Day Fresh' Dairy Wormer now thru July 27, 1980

Lancaster Farming says...

Independent dairymen need a voice

The independent dairymen in Pennsylvania need a single, united voice which speaks for them and only for them.

Three separate and recent issues underline the need for independent dairymen to have a formal channel to speak their piece.

The first is the drafting of SB 1287, the Milk Security Fund legislation The second is the inability of Northeastern independent dairy farmers to speak with one voice when state highway regulations made it illegal for 80,000 pound tankers to roll the highways. The third is the rough handling being given independents by Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative.

There are several sides to each of the three questions and it is not our purpose here to pass on the merits of all of them But it seems one thing has been left out of the decision-making process· the opinion of the independent dairy farmer

The Milk Security Fund, heartily endorsed by this paper, was drawn up almost entirely by representatives of dairy cooperatives The co-ops wrote in a section which allows them to escape the provisions of the Fund, leaving independents to live with the law This is not to demean co-ops they did what was best for their members.

The only serious challenge to co-op ideas came from the Pennsylvania Association of Milk Dealers While PAMD waged an honorable fight, it must be admitted it was working for the dealers' interests and not the producers' interests

The independent shippers, who deal one-on-one with the handlers, had little to no input on the bill They are lucky it turned out as well as it did

In the case of the overweight milk tankers, there was no single organization to go knocking on doors in the state legislature and tell congressmen relief was needed

That such relief came was largely due to a strong union-backed trucking lobby and the work of general farm organizations

But it hardly seems proper that a general group like the Grange Farmers' Association, or Farmers Union, composed of many factions, could be called on regularly to formulate good policy for a specific group Nor could they support a small percentage of members who may be in conflict with another group within the membership

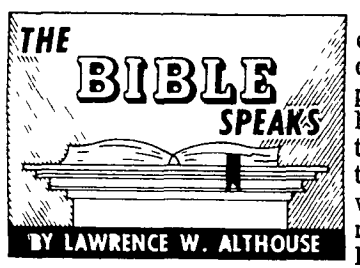
The case in point here is the recent decision by Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative to require Farmland Dairies' independent shippers to join the Co-op

There seems to be no question that Eastern's opportunistic move is legal And Eastern is doing what is best for Eastern But a lot of folks don't feel it's right to force farmers to join a Co-op when those farmers repeatedly turned down the opportunity to do so In fact, many of the shippers earlier left Eastern to seek a better market

Again, the independent has self-seeking outsiders deciding his fate There is no central organization, no rallying point, no one-for-all group to help the independent out of the bind

General farmer organizations remain silent in fear of internal strife or all-out civil war

As milk processors and dairy co-ops grow in size, and markets shrink, the independents in this state would be well advised to consider banding together Such ties may, in the long run, assure their independence



DOESN'T GOD CARE?

Lesson for June 22, 1980

Background Scripture:
Habakkuk.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 20:1-7.

The Book of Habakkuk opens with some nasty questions which the prophet puts to God: "Oh Lord, how long shall I cry for help and thou wilt not hear? Or cry to thee, 'Violence!' and thou wilt not save? Why dost thou make me see wrongs and look upon trouble? (1:1-13). And just in case God doesn't know what he is talking about, the prophet goes on to spell out his complaint· "Destruction and violence are before me; strife and contention arise. So the law is slacked and justice never goes forth. For the wicked surround the righteous, so justice goes forth perverted" (1:4,5).

There's more to his complaint, but that should be enough to make it clear that he was the kind of man who didn't hesitate to make his feelings known to God and challenge him with legitimate complaints. In short, he was saying to God, "Don't you care, God? Maybe you do, but it doesn't look that way to me!"

The Lord Answered

Pretty sharp words for a mere mortal to fling at his God! How dare he question the justice of Almighty God?

Yet Habakkuk knew that he dared not fail to speak to the Lord concerning what was in his heart and mind. To try to keep these indignant feelings to himself, he knew, was futile, for God already saw into his prophet. It was not safe to try to hide his thoughts from God, for the Lord despised deceit.

Furthermore, because Habakkuk dared to ask these questions and make his complaints known, God came to him with a message that was intended not only for him but for all the people. First of all, God tells his prophet, make sure the people can understand the message you deliver for me· "Write the vision; make it plain upon tablets, so he may run who reads it" (2:2). This was not a message for a nation of joggers, but of people in too great a hurry to hear or heed normal communication.

If It Seems Slow...

The message was relatively simple: "For still the vision awaits its time; it hastens to the end — it will not lie. If it seem slow, wait for it; it will surely come, it will not delay" (2:3,4). It may seem that God doesn't care about the plight of his people, about the rampant evil that seems to control the world, but he does and he will settle it as he has promised...in his own time! So be patient, for "the righteous shall live by his faith" (2:4).

I think we can identify well with Habakkuk for when we see how things are going in our own world, when evil seems triumphant and good humiliated, we too are tempted to ask, "Don't you care, God?" And the answer to our just complaint is still as it was then:

Still the vision awaits its time; it hastens to the end — It will not lie.

If it seems slow, wait for it; it will surely come!

TO USE THE AGRONOMY GUIDE

The 1980 Agronomy Guide published by our Extension Service at Penn State is one of the very best handbooks for all farmers. This Guide has been published for yeirs and is up-dated annually; a copy is available at any Extension Office in the state of Pennsylvania. We urge farmers to get one of these and use it. I know there are several thousand out in Lancaster County.

I'm also concerned that many farmers who have them are not using them. Answers to numerous phone calls asking about crop practices can be found in the Agronomy Guide. I suggest that each farmer index the crops that he is growing with tabs so the information can be found more readily. One of these rainy days become more familiar with the contents of this Guide. It should be very useful and contains dependable and researched information.

TO CONTROL FLIES

Weather conditions have favored the breeding of too many flies. Excess moisture along with livestock and vegetative waste will make it possible for heavy fly reproduction. The first step is to clean up the premises and establish good sanitation practices. If there aren't any places for the flies to lay eggs, then the population will decrease.

Barns and box-stalls should be cleaned out frequently. Storage piles should be drenched or sprayed weekly with insecticides such as Diazinon or Sevin. Clean premises that dry out quickly after a rain will not foster high fly production. Don't be blamed by your non-farm neighbors as the main source of flies in the community.

TO CONTROL POND ALGAE

One of the major management problems with many farm ponds is the control of weeds and algae. This is not a new item and is difficult to control. In the first place, algae growth is stimulated by the water being too clear, or too shallow. With both of these cases the sunlight is able to reach the bottom of the pond and start vegetative growth. If the water can be kept cloudy, or if it is deep enough (at least 18 to 24 inches) at all places, there should be less trouble.

If algae or weeds are a problem, the first step is to secure a permit from the Pennsyvlania Fish Commission to treat the pond with chemicals. This is very important before any chemicals are added. Applications for this permit are available from any Extension Office or from the Fish Patrolmen in each county. If the pond is to function in the many different ways it is intended, the algae and weeds should be controlled.

TO ELIMINATE COLORADO POTATO BEETLE

Many potato growers have learned that the Colorado Potato Beetles are thriving on the usual insecticides. This was experienced last year and is again true this summer. It seems they have developed a resistance to Sevin, Malathion, etc. Last year materials such as Ambush were released for their control. And now, we learn that a material named Pydrin has been approved for their control. Sources may be limited for this new material but an effort should be made to obtain it for any sized acreage. These beetles can defoliate a potato plant quickly, resulting in a weak plant and poor tuber development. Directions on the label should be followed accurately. We hope this will be of some help to potato growers.

Is Your Hot Water Heater Going Bad?

DARI-KOOL THERMA•STOR III IS THE ANSWER

WHAT IS THERMA•STOR III?

It is a Heat Exchanger and an Electric Hot Water Heater Combination.

The Therma•Stor Section takes the heat from the bulk tank compressor. Instead of blowing heat into the air, it goes first to the Therma•Stor and transfers the heat over into the water.

The Hot Water Heater Section is an electric element in the top section which heats your hot water all the time when compressor is not running.

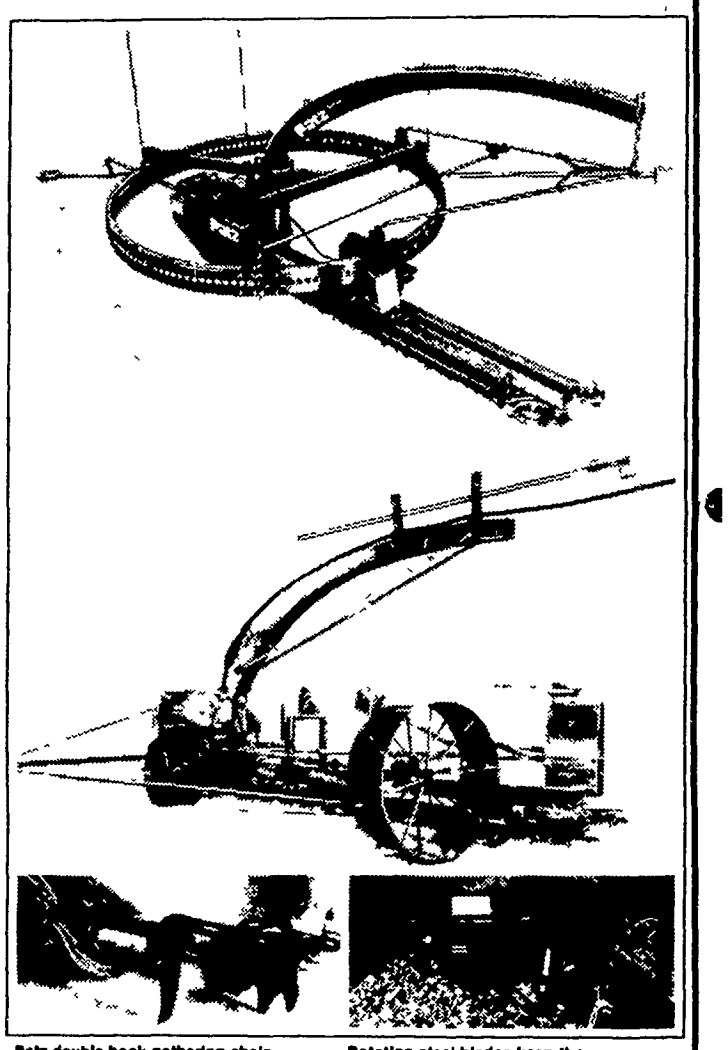
THE PATZ SOLUTION: Reliable Year-Round Feeding

You know the problems caused by hard packed and frozen silage. Patz gives you two solutions to the problem — the Model RD-790 ring-drive silo unloader and the Model 98B surface-drive silo unloader.

Both unloaders feature a double-hook gathering chain with hardened steel cutters and claws that rip through frozen and packed silage. When you push the button, you know you can count on a smooth feeding operation.

Evaluate our powered silo wall cutters. Spring tension holds 4 self-sharpening steel cutter blades in place to follow the curve of the silo wall This keeps silage from building up along the walls, so you can be sure that you're getting all the feed where it belongs . . in the feeder and not stuck to the walls.

Want to know more about the Patz system? See your Patz dealer. He'll show you Patz quality and reliability... two important words to a farmer like you.



Patz double-hook gathering chain features cutters and claws

Rotating steel blades keep the silo wall free of silage buildup (shown without guards).

Record Florida tomato harvest taken

ORLANDO, Fl — Florida's tomato growers have just completed harvesting a record crop of 34 5 million cases This translates into well over one billion pounds of tomatoes and represents a 14.6 per cent increase over last year's all-time high. The announcement was made by Wayne Hawkins, executive vice president of the Florida Tomato Exchange.

"This year's abundant crop has meant lower prices for the consumer and gainful employment for about 7,000 American produce workers," said Hawkins. "The fact that all of Florida's tomatoes w re easily marketed shows their expanding popularity."

Coincidentally, an ever-increasing amount of tomatoes picked in Florida are indigenous to that state They come from specialized breeds of plants developed for Florida's sandy soil and meet strict criteria for taste, color and nutrition Dramatic increases in yield per plant have meant record harvests for a fixed amount of acreage

The new strains are emerging from the Florida Tomato Exchange's extensive research and development program which has been active for five years

Escalated participation this year in the integrated pest management program, which is unique to the United States, has significantly reduced the impact of pesticides on the environment Research continues in Florida to develop a tomato species that will contain its own natural defense against pests and disease

Planting for the 1980-81 season in Florida will begin in July

Grange asks waste dumps on state land

HARRISBURG — In response to increasing public outcry against hazardous waste siting in residential areas, State Grange Master, Charles E. Wismer, Jr, has again called for the state to "take the initiative" and use state-owned land for hazardous waste dumps

"Since the state is working so hard to pass legislation in this area," Wismer said, "it should set the example, and use some of its own land, that is far away from population centers."

Wismer stated that his organization was still working toward getting legislation passed in Harrisburg to this effect.

The need for this kind of law was reinforced by a proposed zoning change in Franklin Township, Fayette County.

The Grange became involved as a result of a request for State Grange Action from members of the Fayette County Granges. The Granges were intensely opposed to a proposed zoning change, which would allow hazardous waste dumping sites to be constructed along Rt. 51 in Watersburg.

Concern was voiced because of possible adverse effects on local water carried in the Redstone Creek.

"If these dump sites were located in state-owned lands, and located far enough away from people," the State Master said, "it would certainly demonstrate the state's willingness to deal with the problem."

Wismer went on to say that "there was no reason why a hazardous waste disposal site has to be located near people".

In conclusion, Wismer recognized that there was a need for disposal sites of this kind, but said he felt that sitting on state lands would not only remove the problem from populated areas, but also free private-sector land for better uses.

1979 Adams County Dairy Princess will continue to promote milk

Christine Gitt ends her reign

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LITTLESTOWN — To Christine Gitt, being around cows is as natural as promoting the products they provide. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gitt, Littlestown R2, she has spent her whole life working with cows and showing them and she devoted her last year speaking up for milk at every opportunity as Adams County's Dairy Princess.

As she completed her reign, she says, "It was always assumed that I would enter the contest." Nevertheless, she states, "I was really surprised when they called my name."

Not surprisingly, she enjoyed making appearances in the last year. She said, "It was a tremendous experience, but it went so fast. I think the contest is important. The children will remember me because they remembered the former Dairy Princess. It is very important to leave a lasting impression. The thing I enjoyed more than anything was speaking in the elementary schools.

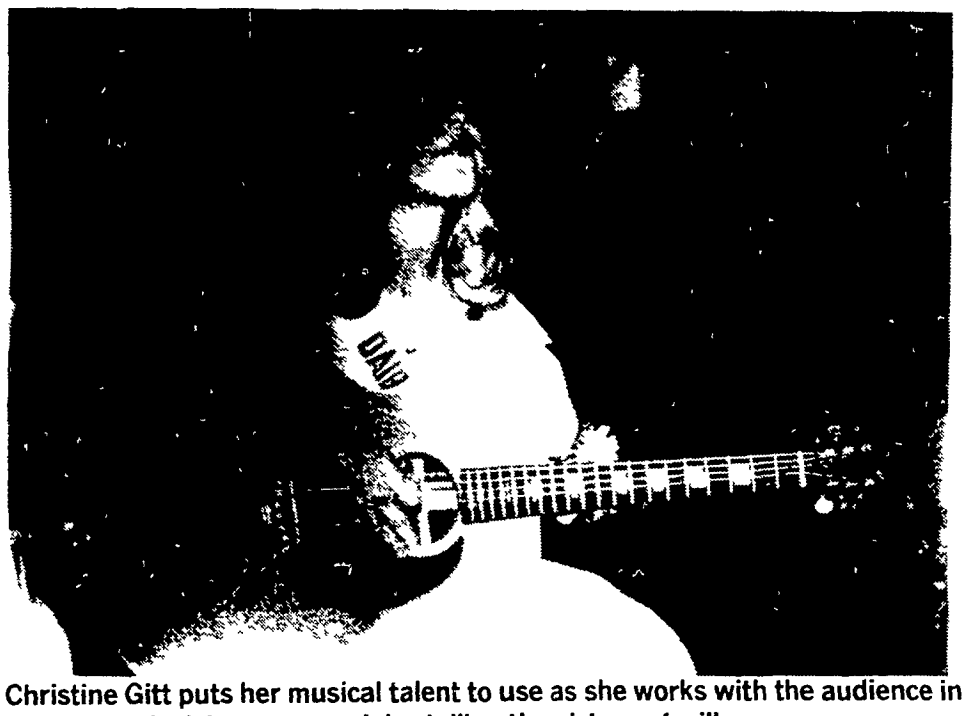
Christine's presentation, which she gave a final time at last week's Dairy Princess contest, was a crowd-pleaser for little ones. She let them help make a television commercial, complete with a movie camera which she credits to her father's "creative genius." Chrissy get a lot of audience participation as she sings with guitar accompaniment, and she talks about the nutrients in milk. The skit is so convincing that some students want to know which channel the commercial will be on.

Here young audience have been appreciative, Chrissy states, adding, "The teachers do a good job of preparing the students. They are really well informed."

Chrissy did supermarket promotions, but says, "I didn't find them so rewarding. It is hard to get a housewife who is trying to get through shopping interested in what you're giving out."

One new promotion that worked well for Chrissy was at the Adams County National Bank in Littlestown, where she positioned herself on a Friday evening, passing out milk and cheese. "I saw a lot of friends and it really worked out well. I got the idea at the seminar."

(Turn to Page A26)



Christine Gitt puts her musical talent to use as she works with the audience in preparing a television commercial extolling the virtues of milk.

Milking is Chrissy's favorite chore on the farm, and one of her jobs is assembling the equipment prior to milking time. Here she works in the milk house but will do the actual milking when the time comes.

Polled Hereford Juniors have busy day in field

DOUGLASSVILLE — The Pennsylvania Junior Polled Hereford Association's field day found close to 100 enthusiastic people, ranging in age from 5 months and up, enjoying the sunshine and balmy weather here at the Jesse Terry farm last Saturday.

One of the highlights of the day was the crowning of the new Polled Hereford queen for Pennsylvania. Last year's queen, Tammy Hamilton, Northeast, passed her crown to Jane Sikorski, R2 Emmaus.

The daughter of John and Mildred Sikorski, Jane has had experience with the Polled Hereford breed. The Lehigh Co. family has 50 registered cattle, and one of them is Jane's personal animal.

The field day judging contest was won by George Hamilton, left, adult division; Paul Horning, center, 12-17 years division; and Philip McMahon, under 12 years division.

The Junior at Emmaus High School has been showing cattle for 7 years. She says showing is her favorite hobby and she's good at it. Just 3 weeks ago she was the reserve grand champion showman at their county cattle show.

She is also a 4-year member of the Lehigh Co. 4-H Livestock Judging team. In 1978, Jane recalled, she was the high Junior individual at the Lehigh Co. Livestock Judging Contest.

Jane commented that what she finds most difficult in judging livestock is the presentation of oral reasons. "You've got to know the terminology and have it down-pat." To help her in judging and in her responsibilities as Polled Hereford queen, Jane said she plans to work on her public speaking abilities.

At April's Little International Livestock Judging Contest Jane was the 8th high individual and a member of the first place team. Jane remarked she finds sheep the hardest to judge with cattle classes being her easiest challenge.

She got to try out her skills at the field day on Saturday. Juniors and adults alike tested their knowledge of cattle in placing two classes of Polled Herefords.

Don Kniffen, livestock specialist for Rutgers University was the official judge. He noted that for those people who didn't agree with his placings, "they'd have to adjust their thinking."

First places in the cattle judging went to: Philip McMahon, Green Lane, Montgomery Co., under-12-group; Paul Hartman, Gettysburg, Adams Co., 12-17 group; and George Hamilton, Biglerville, Adams Co., adult group.

The Juniors learned the proper fitting and blocking techniques from their president, Randy Becker, herdsman for Spring Bottom Farm, Gettysburg.

Becker pointed out that there are a lot of fads in showing, but he told the group that their goal is to make their animal look tall, long, and not real fat. "When you're showing cattle, looks mean a lot."

He concluded the demonstration and field day by noting that the Polled Hereford showmen and cattlemen need to emphasize the beef qualities of their breed -SM

Based on the meeting's discussion and debate, PDA drafted a letter of recommendation that alerted the county fair associations about the disease.

In the letter Van Buskirk said:

"Pseudorabies infection has been diagnosed in ten Pennsylvania swine herds and three additional premises have been quarantined because of exposure.

"Transmission of pseudorabies virus appears to be the result of direct nose-to-nose contact. Carrier hogs often appear normal but can shed virus when under stress.

"Other farm animals such as cattle, sheep, and dogs are highly susceptible but do not seem to spread the disease, perhaps because they succumb so quickly.

"Because pseudorabies is a serious threat to our swine breeder industry, the Bureau of Animal Industry recommends that no breeding swine be accepted for exhibition purposes until this outbreak is under control.

"Furthermore, Dr. John Cable, Chief of Swine Health Division, urges exhibitors of market hogs to be sure that these animals go directly to slaughter and that contact with other animals be kept to a minimum.

"In view of the recommendations, I hope your association will limit the exhibition of swine to market and feeder classes. This moratorium should remain in effect until February 1, 1981, or until further notice."

Grumbine noted that he felt the state didn't have a hold on where the pseudorabies came from, and that the seven month moratorium would give PDA the time they needed to get the disease controlled.

"Unfortunately, the disease is easiest to control in the purebred swine," Grumbine said. "With a stroke of the pen, they just don't issue any health papers anymore."

Grumbine said he was upset about the way feeder pigs can "run up and down the East coast uncontrolled."

Even though the state has limited the breeding stock from public fairs and shows, he noted that a producer of breeding swine could still have an on-farm production show and sale.

"By not having a chance to take out livestock to the fairs and shows, we are losing the chance to advertise our product. And that isn't good for the swine industry.

"But if pseudorabies was contracted by a $2000 dairy heifer at a large fair, it wouldn't do the industry any good, either. And it would mean an economic loss to people not connected with the swine industry."

Lebanon County's Leon Arnold, a purebred swine producer, said, "PDA is attacking the problem from the least likely place when they put restrictions on breeding swine. Purebred breeders are careful not to have too much traffic on their farms."

Arnold said he felt that the state would only touch one percent of the hogs by cancelling purebred shows.

He pointed out that the PDA letter was only a recommendation, and that he understood that a show and sale could go on if there were blood tests done on the entries. He said their local Yorkshire Club show and sale, scheduled for July 31 and August 1, has the blood-testing requirement.

Grumbine's and Arnold's sentiments were echoed by McConaughy who said pseudorabies can be rough on the purebred herd

"Any time there is a disruption in showing our swine, there is an automatic disadvantage. However, we've got to get a handle on these diseases—we just can't let them run wild," he said.

McConaughy also agrees that feeder pig control is essential if the disease is to be checked.

"In not controlling feeder pigs—that's where we're making our biggest mistake yet. Those 300,000 pigs coming into the state from every direction are giving us 90-98 percent of our trouble.

"PDA's got the regulations to control the disease, but how do they enforce them on market hogs?"

McConaughy said the purebred breeder is paying the tariff for controlling pseudorabies.

"If we want to ship in an animal, we have to blood test before the animal is shipped, and again after a 30 day isolation period. With feeder pigs, unless they're coming from a high incidence area, you never see a test."

Because of the potential disease problem that can be tied with showing hogs, McConaughy said his family hasn't exhibited breeding swine for about 6 years unless it's a show where the animals are sold and not brought home again. He noted there was too great a risk of infecting his dairy herd and the rest of his purebred Duroc breeding swine.

Lancaster Co producer John Henkel said the pseudorabies moratorium on showing breeding swine gives the state time to evaluate the disease problem.

He pointed out that it was not considered to be a drastic disease situation, otherwise PDA would have shut down showing completely, including feeder pigs.

Henkel added one thing the disease outbreak has done is it's gotten farmers to ask questions of producers before buying swine

"There's a lot of apprehension, and people are more cautious when buying," he said. "But that's what should have been done in the beginning."

Henkel cautioned producers who have breeding stock and who decide to bring in feeder pigs to be extremely cautious.

"Mixing feeder pigs with breeding stock is asking for trouble. With disease control being a problem, the producers who want feeders should make up their minds to stay just in the finishing end of the business."

Summing up the situation, Grumbine said he personally feels the state has the disease in check, but that they're giving themselves the seven month cooling off period to make sure they do

"With the market the way it is now, I'm not sure it couldn't have happened in a better year," he concluded.

Erdenheim Farms hosts livestock judging

BY PAT KAUFFMAN

NORRISTOWN — Erdenheim Farms hosted a livestock judging field day Wednesday, with approximately 300 people in attendance.

During the morning, 4-H, FFA and adult participants were treated to a tour of the farm. The meat of the activities began in the afternoon.

Chester Hughes, Northeast Field Manager of the American Angus Association gave a clinic at the beginning of the afternoon, explaining to the group what they should be looking for in the animals assembled.

Then the fun began, with three groups rotating among the 5 livestock categories and rating them. The categories included market lambs, breeding ewes, angus heifers, angus steers and hogs.

Three groups were assembled, juniors, seniors and adults with approximately 60 participants in each group.

Tie-breaker questions were asked to the group at the end of the judging. Where tie scores were announced, the winner was chosen on the basis of the questions.

Winning in the junior division with the points they received were: 1. Glenn Heffner, R2 Fleetwood, age 10, 236; 2. James Heffner, R2 Fleetwood, age 13, 236; 3. Exchange student tours York farms

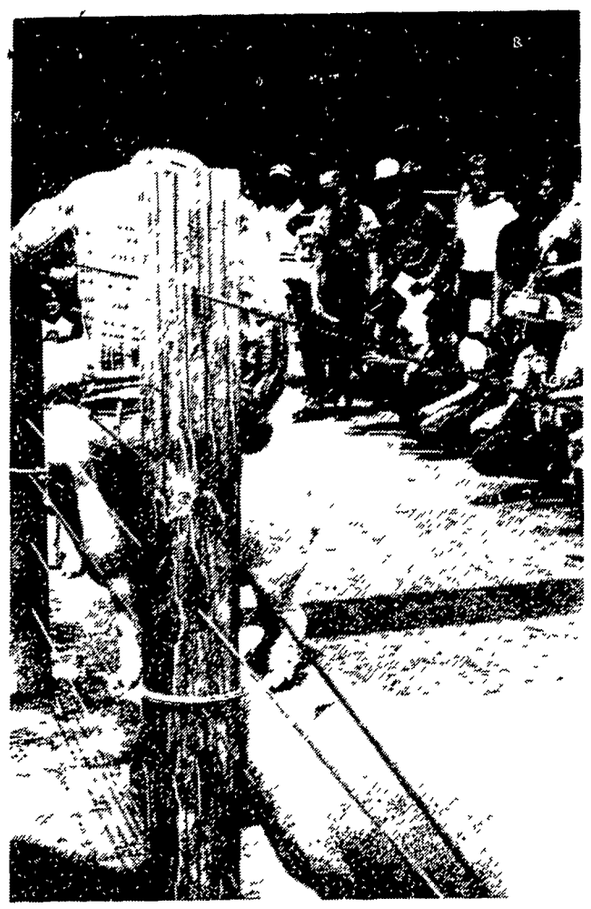
RED LION — Santiago Rossi, Red Lion Area High School's foreign exchange student from Uraguay, recently toured farms in Southern York County as a part of an FFA project.

The first stop was at Annette Walter's of Airville. She demonstrated the proper fitting and showmanship techniques of beef cattle and explained how a European breed, Simmental, is being used to upgrade the quality of calves in their beef herd.



Seniors consider a class of breeding ewes at Erdenheim farms.

The second stop was Airville Farm Service where the business and mechanical end of York County agriculture was discussed.

Greg Innerst's swine breeding operation, located just outside of Red Lion, was the site of the next visit. Innerst explained his swine breeding program where he raises registered Berkshire's and Duroc's.

During a stop at Beth Holtzinger's farm, Rossi was introduced to freeze branding cattle. Holtzinger plans to exhibit her steers at the Farm Show and all steers to be shown at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show in January must be identified by freeze branding before June 1. He also saw some of the 55 acres of tomatoes the Holtzinger's plant and learned about cultural practices in growing tomatoes.

Bryan Workinger showed how replacement calves are cared for. And Kevin Holtzinger explained his farming operation which milks 120 cows in a milking parlor and farms over 300 acres of land.

Cows aren't rosy when they've got pink eye

A reader asks:

How contagious is pinkeye, and what precautions do I need to take before animals that have previously had the disease into my clean herd? How long do they carry the disease?

Dr. Riegel comments:

Pinkeye, also known as Infectious Bovine Kerato Conjunctivitis, Infectious Keratitis or Infectious Conjunctivitis is very contagious.

The disease is seen primarily during the warm weather months when the fly population is at its peak. Flies appear to be the major vector causing the spread of the organism that causes the disease. However, the disease can be seen during winter months as well, spread by direct contact.

At one time, bacterin, Moraxella bovis was thought to be the primary causative agent of the disease. Now other bacteria and a virus have been isolated from cases of pinkeye.

The signs of the disease are spasms of the eyelid, redness around the eye, excessive tearing, a whitish appearance around the outer, normally clear, part of the eye. These symptoms, if untreated, may proceed to the swelling of center of eye, then to ulcering and in some cases rupturing and collapse of the eye. These signs may be seen in one or both eyes.

There is one theory that puts forth the idea that the organism which causes the disease is present in the eye at all times but is kept under control by normal ocular secretions. If the eye is irritated by either flies, dusty conditions, pollen etc., the disease will appear.

There are other diseases which can result in sore eyes such as Infectious Bovin Rhinotracheitis, and Bovine Virus Diarrhea, and shipping fever. Pinkeye must be differentiated from these. With these diseases, both eyes are usually affected to the same degree at the same time.

As far as bringing animals which have had pinkeye into a clean herd, I would say that when excessive tearing has stopped you would be relatively safe in introducing them in to a so-called clean herd. Sources of irritation to the eyes should be kept under control.

Almost every Spring we encounter a farm with a severe outbreak of pinkeye. I can recall one in particular a few years back in which a group of about 15, 400-pound dairy heifers were turned out on rapidly maturing orchard grass pasture.

In a short time almost 100 percent of the heifers had damage in one or both eyes. On examining the situation it didn't take long to find the source of eye irritation. The seedy awns of the orchard grass were at eye level.

This eye irritation problem has been alleviated in subsequent year by clipping the pastures before introducing the stock or before pasture is over ripe.

FmHA, CCC lower interest rates

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Interest rates on housing and farm loans made by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farmers Home Administration and crop loans made by the Commodity Credit Corporation have been reduced in response to the nation's rural credit needs, Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland said Thursday.

Changes in rates on CCC loans become effective immediately, changes in housing loans will be effective at the close of business June 13 and new rates for farm loans will be effective at the close of business June 16.

The interest rate on all 1980 crop commodity loans made by CCC is lowered from 13 to 11.5 percent. However, the interest rate on CCC farm storage facility and drying equipment loans will remain at the 13 percent rate.

Interest rates for Farmers Home Administration economic emergency loans to farmers were lowered to 11 percent for real estate and to 11.5 percent for production loans. Both had been 14 percent.

The new rates for emergency disaster loans will be 12.5 percent on real estate and 13.5 percent for production loans. Both had been 14 percent.

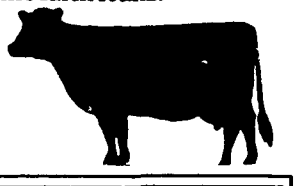
Mortgage interest rates on low-to-moderate single-family homes were lowered to 11.5 percent and rural rental housing interest rates went to 10.75 percent. Both had been 13 percent.

Regular Farmers Home Administration farm real estate loans will carry a new interest rate of 11 percent while regular farm operating loans will be at 10.5 percent.

Interest rates for actual loss disaster emergency loans will remain at 5 percent as prescribed by law.

Interest rates for the Farmers Home Administration program for "limited resource" farmers will remain at 5 percent for real estate loans and 7 percent for operating loans.

Interest rates for loans guaranteed by Farmers Home Administration will continue to be negotiated between borrower and lender. These include loans for business and industrial development, for housing for persons with above-moderate incomes and for some farm loans.



Conn. operator suspended

NORTH FRANKLIN, Ct. — Samuel Berkowitz, formerly doing business as North Franklin Commission Sales, North Franklin, Conn., has been suspended for 18 months and ordered to stop violating payment, trust account and recordkeeping requirements of the Packers and Stockyards Act.

Berkowitz, who did business in Connecticut, Rhode Island and southern Massachusetts, is not operating at present. The order, like a permanent injunction, was issued to insure future compliance with the P&S Act.

The order was issued in default when Berkowitz failed to answer an administrative complaint filed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Berkowitz was ordered to cease and desist from:

Issuing insufficient funds checks or drafts in payment for livestock purchases and in payment of net proceeds due consignors;

Failing to pay when due for livestock purchases and to transmit when due payment of net proceeds to consignors; and

Endangering prompt payment to consignors by using funds due to consignors of livestock for his own purposes and otherwise failing to properly maintain his custodial account for shippers' proceeds.

The 18-month suspension begins June 9, and continues thereafter until the deficit in his custodial account has been eliminated.

Governor proclaims October is Livestock Month

BY SHEILA MILLER

HARRISBURG — Governor Dick Thornburgh, on Tuesday morning, proved once again that he is well aware of the value of agriculture in the Commonwealth.

Following the footsteps of April's Egg Month and June's Dairy Month proclamations comes the Governor's formal signing of the necessary paperwork proclaiming October as Livestock Month.

In making his formal proclamation, the Governor stated the signing was taking place in June so that everything will be ready for October.

He added that the designation of the month as a special recognition for livestock people in Pennsylvania shows how important the $1.4 million industry is to the state

Representing the livestock industry were Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell; Henry Gruber, head of livestock procurement for A & B Packing Co., Allentown; Dr. Everett Denlinger, president of the Pa. Livestock Assoc.; Pat Halloway, secretary of the Pa. Angus Assoc.; and John Kimbark, secretary-treasurer of the Sheep and Wool Growers Assoc.

Ag district bill passes 177 to 5

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania House this week passed HB 1793, the ag district bill, by a vote of 177 to 5.

The bill gives counties the authority to purchase development rights. The few negative votes cast by Pittsburgh area legislators were overwhelmingly overridden by lawmakers from other areas of the state.

The bill now will move to the Senate for further consideration.

Representative Noah Wenger, vice chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said he was optimistic about the bill's future in the upper chamber.

The only problem he saw with the bill's smooth passage there is if an ammendment is added. Because the end of the current legislative session is near there may not be time for the bill to come back through the House for concurrence if an ammendment is added.

Another important piece of agricultural legislation in the Senate is HB 1794, the right to farm bill.

Introduced by Wenger on behalf of the mushroom industry and strongly supported by the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation, the bill was ammended to include food processors as well as farmers in its provisions.

HB 1794 would make it illegal for any local municipality to pass a nuisance ordinance such as on banning standard farming practices.

Things like lime dust and typical farm odors are included under the bill's protection.

The senate concurred 47 to 0 on SB 985 and SB 986, the Knapp bills, which would prevent school boards and other municipal bodies from land speculation.

It now goes to the house for concurence with ammendments added. Pittsburgh legislators may raise some last second opposition to those bills, as they want Class I school districts excluded. They have missed many previous opportunities to get such an exclusion written in HB 2406 is a new noxious weed bill which applies only to Johnsongrass. It is moving in place of the old bill which would have allowed new species to be declared noxious at times in the future.

The old bill drew fire because it would have included multiflora rose as a noxious weed. That measure was opposed by rose growers and the Pennsylvania Game Commission which, in the past, has urged its planting as a game cover.

HB 2406, the eminent domain bill which is supported by the State Grange, passed with 67 votes against It now moves to the senate where some opposition may be encountered.—CH

Lehigh ag teacher is state winner

SCHNECKSVILLE — Stephen Ragosta, vocational agriculture teacher at Lehigh County Vo-Tech school at Schnecksville has been named state winner of the 1980 National Vocational Teachers Assoc.-John Deere "Outstanding Young Member" award for Penn-

The award is sponsored annually by John Deere, Moine, Illinois in cooperation with NVATA, Alexandria, Virginia.

The NVATA is a national professional organization serving more than 10,000 vocational educators in agriculture throughout the United States. Members include elementary, secondary and post-secondary teachers, state supervisors of agricultural education, teacher educators at colleges/ universities, and college students majoring in agricultural education.

Vocational agriculture education is continually faced with a shortage of qualified teachers. Unless more young teachers remain in the profession for a longer period of time, the teacher shortage will continue.

The award is designed to encourage younger teachers to become more involved in activities that induce longer tenure. It recognizes those who have taught three, but not more than five years and have assumed an active role in professional leadership, have been active in community activities, and have implemented innovations to meet the needs of the local vocational agriculture students.

Membership and participation in professional, civic, community and farm organizations and the accomplishments of students in various areas of the Future Farmers of America and/or the National Post-secondary Agriculture Student Organizations are criteria for selecting winners.

The "Outstanding Young Member" award applications of state winners will be evaluated by special NVATA Selection Committee June 15. Six regional winners will be named. The regional winners will be announced July 1.

Dennis Hoke, county extension agent, was the official judge for the event. After the berries were judged, Harry Bachman, a Lebanon County auctioneer, auctioned the strawberries to members of the Kiwanis. The top box sold for $110.

The results of the contest were as follows: 1. Harold Weik - Cedar Crest FFA; 2. Mike Grill - Northern Lebanon FFA; 3. Mike Geesaman - Northern Lebanon FFA, and 4. Brian Blatt, Northern Lebanon FFA.

Triple Crown wins beef cook-off

BY SHEILA MILLER

SHIREMANSTOWN — For the second time in its five year history, Rosemary Gentilcore captured first place on Monday in the Pennsylvania Beef Cook-Off Contest.

Her entry, 'Triple Crown Mini Loaves' beat 28 other Pa. entries and will go on to the national contest to be held in Scottsdale, Arizona this summer.

Gentilcore, from Bethlehem, Northampton Co., explained she was familiar with the contest since its 'birth' and was the state winner in 1975 with an eye-of-the-round 'gourmet-ish' recipe. This recipe didn't do well at the national contest, held in Colorado that year, she said, because "they were looking for a more economical recipe."

With that in mind, her entry for the following year was 'Sauerbrauten Italiano', but that was still "too fancy", she sighed, and only placed 2nd in the State contest.

About three weeks before the May 15 entry deadline, Gentilcore said she began working on her mini-loaves recipe. This recipe features a three-layered meal used ground beef, cheese, and and onion rings, hence the name 'Triple Crown'.

Gentilcore noted the cooking time on her recipe calls for 25-30 minutes. The 25 minutes, she said, leaves the loaves with a slight pinkish-color inside. This is the way she prefers her beef, she said, because when it is cooked on the rare side the meat dish is "more moist and you can taste the beef more."

The beef cook-off is sponsored by the Pa. Beef Council, along with the Pa. Department of Agriculture, and the Pa. Cattlemen's Association.

The contest is open to any resident of the state who is 18 years-old or older. However, no one with a professional food status is eligible to compete, according to Mary Wilson, chairman.

Each recipe has to contain 2-5 pounds of beef chuck, round, rump, fresh brisket, or ground beef. A maximum cooking time of 4 hours was set for the recipe entries, however this does not include time needed for preliminary preparations such as marinating.

Out of the 28 entries received, eight were selected as finalists. These contestants, armed with their necessary ingredients, cooked up a storm at Trinity High School. Judging the prepared beef delights were Betty Rode, PDA; Mrs. [illegible], Germanville, Lehigh Co. and owner of an Angus farm and meat market in Schnecksville; and, Fay Strickler, home economist for the Cooperative Extension Service in Berks Co.

The entries were judged on taste, with a possible 40 points; ease of preparation and practicality, 20 points; originality, 20 points; and appearance, 20 points.

Helping with the day's festivities and taste-testing the completed entries were Laura Weinberger, the Pa. Cattlemen's Queen; Lowell Wilson, secretary of the Pa. Cattlemen's Association; and Luther Snyder and Chester Heim, Deputy-Secretaries for PDA.

The second place award went to Nancy Gutekunst, Allentown, with her Yorkshire Pub Beef with English Parsley Sauce. Ruth Roberts, Bensalem, was the third place winner with Beeflower Au Gratin; and fourth place went to Norma Broderick, Waterford, for her Italian Style Beef Amores.

Copies of the contest recipes will be available within two weeks from the Pa. Cattlemen's Association or the PDA, said Lowell Wilson.

For a sneak preview, here's the first-place recipe:

Triple Crown
Mini Loaves

1 (3 oz.) can french fried onions, finely crushed and divided
2 tablespoons brown sugar
4 teaspoons prepared mustard
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons flour
¼ cup catsup
2 pounds lean ground beef
1 egg, slightly beaten
4 slices American cheese, cut in half

(A) Combine ⅓ cup crushed french fried onions and 2 tablespoons brown sugar. Put 1 tbl. of preceding mixture into each of 8 (6 oz.) well-greased oven-proof custard cups. Top each with ½ tsp. prepared mustard.
(B) Melt butter or margarine in small saucepan. Remove pan from heat - stir in 2 tbl. flour to form smooth paste. Add ¼ cup catsup - stir to blend.
(C) Combine in large bowl: 2 pounds ground beef, beaten egg, catsup mixture and remaining crushed french fried onions, mix lightly, but thoroughly.
(D) Press ⅓ cup meat mixture into each dish. Place ½ slice American cheese, folded into quarters in center of each. Press remaining meat into each dish to fill within ½ inch of top. (Can be prepared several hours before serving, if desired).
(E) Place dishes on cookie sheet for easier handling.

Bake uncovered in preheated 350°F. oven for 25-30 minutes. Remove from oven. Allow to set in dishes a few minutes. Run spatula around outer edge of each dish before inverting onto serving platter.

Garnish with parsley & cherry tomatoes if desired. Yields 8 servings.

First place in the 5th Pa. Beef Cook-Off Contest went to Rosemary Gentilcore, Bethlehem. She received congratulations and the winner's check from Pa. Cattlemen Queen Laura Weinberger.

Dairy princess

Another new approach for this promotion-minded Dairy Princess was to distribute milk and cheese at the South Mountain Fair during the evening of the dairy shows. Chrissy said, "I got a lot of good comments and we had a good crowd. But it was very hectic to show and give out ribbons and pass out milk and cheese."

Chrissy's parents farm about 200 acres and have a herd of 70 cows, with 30 milking. Chrissy owns 16 animals herself, which stem from her 4-H involvement. She is very much interested in the farm work, and while she prefers milking, she was in the hay field on the day of this interview. She plans to spend her summer working on the farm.

Chrissy is a sophomore majoring in dairy science at Virginia Tech, and has more than a passing knowledge of good cows. She is firm in her commitment, "My goal is to breed my own herd. It is so rewarding to breed a good cow to show. I am trying to develop a good breeding program with my father. We discuss it."

While she has been trying to build up her herd over the last few years, she makes no bones about the fact that she ultimately would like to merchandise her animals. In fact, she is presently trying to sell a bull. "I have sold calves, but haven't yet sold animals in a major way." With merchandising in mind, she says she selects bulls on the basis of popularity, predicted difference and milk. "You have to breed what you can sell," she states.

Of course, the selling may not come easy. Chrissy's affection for her animals show up when she says, "Once I get my herd built up, I will try to part with them."

Showing is important to Chrissy. She explains, "I like meeting people and I have met more people that way than any other. It is also good for promotion and merchandising."

She has been showing in 4-H for ten years, but her introduction to 4-H was not smooth. As her first heifer, her father gave her a senior yearling calf when she was nine years old. "We had a bad year and we sold her," Chrissy recalls. Then he gave her a February calf with Chrissy raised to a two-year-old. The first calf was a bull, but the cow had a beautiful udder until it was time to milk and then it was discovered that she milked in only three teats. Chrissy remembers clearly, "I cried. She didn't milk but I convinced Dad to keep her. When she had her second bull calf I was totally frustrated.

It was then that her father suggested they buy a cow named Nellie whom they had boarded at one time. Chrissy says, "I hated her. But she was my 4-H project and I took her to the Maryland State Fair and she stood in last place." She improved, however, and the following year stood second. "I grew very fond of her," Chrissy states. "All my cow families start from her. She redeemed herself by going on to become All-Pennsylvania and Grand Champion at the Farm Show. She is classified 2E.

Chrissy has become very involved in the Dairy Science Club at Virginia Tech, and at their little All-American this Spring, she placed second in fitting and showing. The student who beat her went on to become overall grand champion fitter and showman. "I had a grade heifer who was a little fat. It was a good experience to get to know people. You do all the feeding for two weeks prior to the contest and you get to know everyone," she said.

Putting her promotional ability to use, Chrissy also volunteered to be a tour guide for farm tours at Tech, something she has found rewarding.

A good judge of cows, Chrissy placed first in the state as a member of the Adams County 4-H judging team. On the state team which traveled to Madison, Wisconsin, she was 15th in the nation. "Judging teaches you to use the right word at the right time. I would like to try to judge on Virginia Tech's judging team but it's not like being on the 4-H team," she puts forth.

As a prelude to working out for the team, Chrissy participated in a 4-H and FFA judging clinic where she served as coach for four individuals. "I could see them improving. It was an education for me."

Chrissy was also on the Adams County Dairy Bowl team which placed second the first time they judged at the state and won the contest the following year.

A 1979 graduate of Littlestown High School, Chrissy represented the County once before, as the 1978 Adams County Junior Miss. She calls the program "wonderful," adding, "It is not a beauty contest, but a scholarship pageant. It taught me to get up in front of a group. They were interested in all aspects - physical fitness, poise and appearance, grades and talent." Chrissy's talent was singing, which she has successfully utilized to promote milk during her reign.

Chrissy admits that when she was younger she was not interested in anything but cows. In fact, it may seem strange to some, but Chrissy relates, "When I was at school, I missed the cows." She said her phone conversations with her parents centered around which cow freshened and how much milk her animals were giving. She added that her parents supported her wholeheartedly during her reign, saying, "My Mom did so much help. She was a gem."

bridge the gap between the farmer and the consumer and let them know about the abundant supply of nutrients in milk. Milk tastes great - it's refreshing and it's easy to see why milk's the one."

She makes it clear that being Dairy Princess hasn't changed the way she is or will continue to be. "Before I was crowned, I was promoting milk and it won't end. I will continue to promote milk."

Evans said that the main concern in Maryland is the possible dumping of water into the Susquehanna which empties into the Chesapeake Bay.

John Crosby from the Maryland Environmental Health Administration in Baltimore said that Maryland officialdom concurs with the NRC's decision to vent and that an NRC press release was carried in the Maryland papers Thursday about the venting.

He expects no adverse reactions from the people in this state.

He said "Pennsylvania farmers have nothing to fear from Maryland consumers."

He also said that the people in his state are more concerned with the possible dumping of water into the Susquehanna. But he noted with the amount of pollution already in the Chesapeake, Marylanders have nothing to fear.

Every day of the year, milk is produced for market by some 200,000 commercial dairy farmers throughout the United States. Every other day, milk is picked up by a fleet of some 20,000 trucks and transported to one of 1600 bottling plants or 3000 dairy product manufacturing plants. Another 20,000 trucks distribute the milk products which are sold through 500,000 outlets.

"Harvestall Chillcuring works great. I get top quality corn for less than I used to pay for shelling alone."

ANDY GLICK, Oley, Pa.

"I used to get my crib corn shelled for feeding my hogs. But since that cost around 8¢ a bushel even before hauling costs, I decided I'd be better off with storage. I went with the Harvestall and have never regretted it.

"I've put as high as 32% moisture corn in my Harvestall and you know, I've never had a mold problem."

"So I'm impressed with the Harvestall system and the quality corn I get with it. And I get it cured down for less than it used to cost just for shelling.

"I've recommended the Harvestall to my friends. I'm really happy with it."

HARVESTALL
The Harvestall Chillcuring System

It's simple When grain comes out of the field it's a living seed So instead of destroying the seed with high heat, moisture is removed with natural air ventilation The grain keeps all its feed value, there is less shrinkage than with heat drying because only moisture is removed, not dry matter You'll never see white dust in Chillcured corn You actually save half of what you're used to losing in heat shrink

There's no gas or oil to buy Natural air carries away heat and moisture as the corn releases it

Harvestall Chillcuring is a back-to-basics system that just simply makes good sense Find out more about it

LEBANON — Over 200 4-H'ers played individual and team sports at the annual 4-H Olympic Day held Wednesday at the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds.

According to Linda Rohrbach, Extension 4-H Agent, 10 youth were named as high individuals in "crazy contests" based on physical fitness skills. Named as winners were Dan Shiner - sack race and badminton hit, Audrey Arnold - Ring Toss, Jose Cruz - Ping Pong Throw, Sonny Valentin and Ann Rogers - Bean Bag Throw, Amy Nartz - Bean Bag Toss, Susan Rhodes - Frisbee Golf, Lynn Kleinfelter - Obstacle Course, Tim Brandt - Broad Jump, Kathy Brandt - Football Throw.

The event, which attracted over 225 4-H youth, teens, and adults, was planned and carried out by 35 teens who made sure the whole program went well from registration to cleanup

All participants had the chance to participate in four of the following softball, volleyball, macrame crafts, kickball, dodgeball, crazy relays, frisbee football, and individual contests

In the afternoon free pony rides were offered by 4-H horse club members. A pig chase, coordinated by 4-H teen Jodi Kreider, and folk dancing involved over 150 members.

Two group contests, pyramid building and pie-eating, involved all the participants in the evening program Other features in the evening included awards to the high salesman for the county-wide sub-sale and folk dancing.

The facilities were cleared of scrap paper during the second annual garbage collection contest.

A picnic dinner was provided by the Lebanon 4-H Development Fund and Hamilton Bank. The meal was prepared by adult 4-H leaders chaired by Gail Shiner, Myerstown.

Adult volunteer assisting throughout the planning process was Judy LeRoy Planning for the event began in April.

One of the most popular events at the 4-H Olympics was the pony rides taken during the free-time.

Acid rain damages discussed

HARRISBURG — About 50 interested people turned out for the Thursday evening meeting on acid rain, mostly government officials and planning commission members.

But two farmer representatives sat through the meeting at the Swatara Township Municipal Building.

Guy Donaldson and Arthur Mussleman, both Adams County fruitgrowers, listened to James Lynch of Penn State discuss the effects of acid precipitation on water quality, forests, and agricultural land.

Lynch told the group that there is a growing concern about acid rain across the state. He admitted there was a lot the researchers don't know about the impact acid rain has on the environment, but he noted it is definitely a problem.

Lynch has been studying the problem since 1973. He said, however, it is difficult to get viable data because of the sensitivity of the monitoring equipment.

"The sampler is so sensitive to pollution that if you just put your hand in the container for an instant, you'll ruin the sample."

Lynch's data points out that the acid rain pollution problem is intensifying in the East, and is starting to spread towards the South and West.

He said that in Pennsylvania over the past 6 years, the average pH for the rainfall was 4.04. Considering neutral is 7.0, this means the rainfall was acidic.

The lowest pH recorded was 3.23, and as Lynch explained, was recorded when the winds were coming from the West. These winds carry the pollution from the states along the Ohio River and Great Lakes Region across Pennsylvania.

The highest pH Lynch recorded at his sampling stations in Huntingdon Co. was 5.1. This measurement was taken last year, he said, when Hurricane David came up the East coast.

Lynch told the group the lowest pH's are recorded during the growing season, with an average of 3.94. The lowest level recorded, he said, was 3.75 back in 1975.

During the dormant period, October through April, Lynch pointed out, the pH levels raise slightly to 4.14.

What causes this fluctuation in pH levels? Lynch said he believes it might be related to the sulfate levels in the air, with the lowest pH levels being recorded when the sulfate levels are highest.

Another theory, pointed out by James Salvaggio of the Pa. Department of Environmental Resources, Bureau of Air Quality, is that snow is less efficient in removing sulfur dioxide from the air, therefore there is a higher pH, or less acid precipitation, during the winter months.

"We are in the eye of the hurricane," remarked Lynch. He said the areas surrounding Pennsylvania generally have less acidic rain than what falls on the Commonwealth.

There is a lack of information on the impact of this rainfall, he said, but there are reports that it causes crop damage, kills fish, causes apple spotting, and reduces the water quality.

Lynch added there is information that documents there is direct injury to forest land from the acid rain.

"The rain actually dissolves the waxy surface on the leaf, and destroys the guard cells that control moisture loss in the tree. As a result the guard cells are prevented from closing, and the vapor is allowed to escape."

He hypothesized that in a period of drought, when the tree is under stress, the acid rain could possibly kill the tree

Studies show that acid rain increases the leaching of minerals and nutrients from the soil, Lynch noted, lowering its fertility. But, he added, it also increases the rate of weathering of bedrock, creating new soil, and may actually be increasing the nutrient level somewhat.

The acid rain has been demonstrated to kill off hardwood and pine seedlings, also, he noted. However, he said, some of the studies were done under simulated green house conditions.

"The green house studies do show cause and effect, but under much different conditions than those which would occur in nature."

Even if the acid rain cut the annual growth rate by ⅓, Lynch said it would not have much impact on the economy of the forest product industry.

What does have an effect on industry is the rapid change in pH in the streams as the result of acid rainfall, Lynch stressed. He said there are serious fish kills because of sudden changes, like one stream that measured a pH change in one hour dropping from 7.0 to 5.5.

"Such a drastic change does not give plants and fish a chance to get acclamated," he said.

The acid rain accumulation in snow may change the fish specialists theory on Spring kills, he noted

"When the snow melts and releases the acid and heavy metals into the streams at a fast rate, this may be what's killing the fish rather than the build up of organic acids—what it was formerly attributed to," said Lynch.

As far as the acid rains long range effect on the pH of soil, Lynch noted it will depend on the buffering capacity of each individual soil type. He pointed out an EPA study showed the acid rain actually stimulated the growth of certain plants—it injures the foliage but doesn't hurt the productivity.

What's being done about acid rainfall? According to Lynch, not much. "We recognize it's a problem, but we don't know its extent. We need to worry about that before we worry about a control."

The DER official said the state is monitoring air quality from Pennsylvania and adjoining states, measuring the pollution level of industrial areas.

Salvaggio told the group cleaning coal before it is used in power generation has helped to eliminate some of the air quality problems, but there are no easy, cheap solutions to cleaning up the acid rain.

Guy Donaldson, the Adams Co. fruitgrower, said he was leaving the meeting with more questions about acid rain than were answered.

"I know that I have to keep my soil between a pH of 6 and 7 for good production, so if this acid rain lowers the soil pH it will have an effect. Other than that, we just don't know what these rains are doing to agricultural products, or how to deal with them."

Until more research and funding comes through to answer some of these questions, farmers will not be sure whether to be happy or upset when it rains.—SM

Two new farm bills begin 1981 debate

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Senator Max Baucus of Montana, Senator George McGovern of South Dakota and Senator Carl Levin of Michigan have introduced two bills designed to ensure the continued viability of family farms in America.

The first is the Family Farm Development Act of 1980. This comprehensive bill: encourages the development and ownership of family farms; reorients USDA research and education relating to family farms; discourages tax-loss farming; provides opportunities for beginning farmers; provides financial assistance for farmers involved in small-scale alcohol production and appropriate technologies; and broadens marketing programs within USDA and encourages direct marketing.

The second bill, the Farm Tax Equity Act of 1980, makes the following changes in the federal tax code: the total amount of tax deductions allowed for an agricultural investor could not exceed his income derived from farming plus $17,500. Taxpayers with adjusted income less than $17,500 could continue to subtract all allowable farm losses; farmers whose gross income from farming exceeded $100,000 would be required to use accrual (as opposed to cash) accounting methods to determine taxable income; and foreign investors would be required to pay capital gains on profits from sales of farm or other rural land.

Senator Baucus said, "There is extensive evidence that family farms are efficient economically and productively. The reasons why many family farmers are having trouble staying on the land and newcomers are having trouble beginning farming are structural ones — reasons that have more to do with tax laws, research policies, marketing systems and farm price support policies than they do with economic efficiency."

INTRODUCTORY SPECIAL ON THE NEW BUTLER BARN CLEANER

NEW HOOK™ LINK CHAIN

■ ALL FORGED LINK ■ EXTRA THICK STEEL AT WEAR POINTS

BUTLER®

ENJOY THESE BENEFITS:

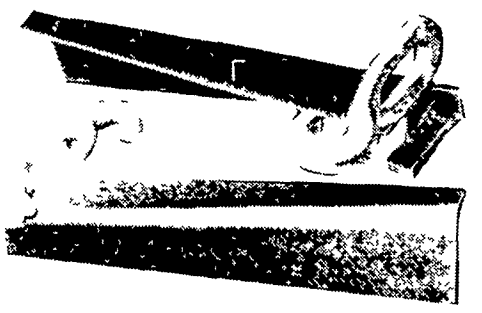
• STRONG! You get strength where it really counts — in the easy-tightening forged hook-link chain. Extra strength is forged into every link at the contact points in both the hook and the eye.

• POWERFUL! You get power, plus power to spare, in the massive Super 500 drive unit with its 55-pound main gear And its drive shaft is big so you can easily pull up to 450' of hook-line chain!

• FAST! Now you can clean gutters in your barn or hog house up to 28' per minute to reduce waiting time — AND to get manure liquid up the elevator more easily. No barn cleaner on the market works faster!

• BUILT TO LAST! Simple drive unit design, quality details, and crafted construction give years and years of life to your investment Each component is built to last — like the box-welded precision-machined drive, the 10-gauge galvanized steel elevator, the quick-detachable yet strong chain and the sturdy paddle wiper.

• PLUS POSITIVE SHEAR PROTECTION Yes, you get POSITIVE shear protection of your powerful spur gear drive unit. When something jams, the bolts in the drive unit shear cleanly to stop the chain. The chain sprocket and the drive unit hub can't rust together Why not? Because there's an air space between them! Another performance feature!



WELDED PADDLE ASSEMBLY

Paddles with reinforced wear shoes are welded to the hook line at a 12° angle so manure liquids tend to be carried by the 4" deep trailing end of the paddle

ABS receives President's award

DE FOREST, Wis. — American Breeders Service, DeForest, Wisconsin, a division of W. R. Grace & Company, was recently awarded the President's "E" Award at a special luncheon.

Russell H. Leitch, District Director, U.S. Department of Commerce, presented the coveted President's "E" Award.

He explained, "In 1961, President Kennedy initiated the Presidential "E" Award, to recognize companies that had contributed substantially to the exports of the United States. To win the award, a company is required to demonstrate innovation and effort.

"This is measured in several ways. By the total value of sales made by the company and the increases in sales over three years. Consideration also is given to the increase, during that same period, in exports as a percentage of the company's total business.

Leitch continued, "When we looked into the statistics, we found some rather interesting facts. ABS, this nation's largest A.I. organization, markets both dairy and beef semen to sixty countries in addition to North America.

"But, what really impressed us was the fact that, in a three year period, the management of this organization made 67 foreign visits and hosted 3,000 foreign visitors to the United States. This effort, plus the training in the use of frozen semen that ABS has provided its distributors and agents in these countries, has cascaded to reach thousands of customers and users."

saying, "It's really no surprise then, that this organization has, for the past three years, increased its exports by a startling percentage...and, in this case, it wasn't ammunition, it wasn't weapons, it was something that is going to help feed the people of the world."

Robert E. Walton, president of American Breeders Service, received the "E" Award certificate and pennant on behalf of ABS.

The certificate for the President's "E" Award was presented in the dairy bull barn at the International Headquarters at DeForest, Wisconsin. Pictured left to right are Robert Thayer, Administration, Marketing Division, Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection; Dr. Robert E. Walton, President, American Breeders Service Ronald F. Eustice, Manager, International Division, Europe and Africa American Breeders Service; and Robert D. Pelkey, Director, International Division, American Breeders Service.

The Bush Hog TM-5 Lawn Care Rotary Cutter provides a smooth, clean cut on any large grassy area This rugged lawn maintenance mower excels when operating on estates, parks, golf courses, wherever well groomed lawns are a must

Clean Cutting

A flexible mast allows the TM-5 to "float" when operating on uneven terrain, and the rear discharge of grass eliminates annoying pile ups Blade overlap is 1½", so that skipping is no problem The blade tip speed is almost 3000 fpm more than most competitive mowers, assuring a cleaner cut

Special Belting

Belting on the TM-5 is in-line—to eliminate annoying twists, jumping out of place This special belting is rated up to 2600 hours of life, with extreme resistance to stretching and tearing

Fast Assembly, Fully Shielded

Assembly of the TM-5 is fast, simple A new spindle housing design allows individual bearings to be replaced if necessary, rather than the complete housing assembly Cutter blades are enclosed by the base frame, and the TM-5 is fully shielded for operator protection A shear pin on the driveline is standard equipment cases have been found through the back-tracing of animals which have been sold."

The Bureau of Animal Industry presently is continuing its review and consideration of various options involving pseudorabies programs which are conducted in other states, Dr. Cable added.

Among these options under consideration is the taking of blood samples when sows and boars are slaughtered

"This appears to be one of the most viable options under consideration," Dr Cable said.

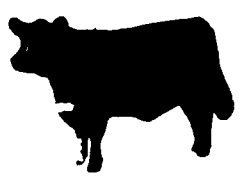
"A program of this type appears to be working quite well in places like Virginia and Maryland"

The PDA has also been encouraging swine producers to participate in testing programs to have their herds declared pseudorabies negative.

But in the cases where positive tests result, there are no provisions for indemnity to cover depopulation

Vaccination, which is utilized in some parts of the Midwest is considered to be one of the least desirable options A hog which is vaccinated can still pick up the pseudorabies virus and become a carrier of the disease

In the use of some vaccines, hogs develop the disease symptoms. Then, it is impossible to determine whether the animal is a vaccinated hog or one that is a true carrier.—DA



Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

The Anti-nuclear people—not the radicals, the fanatics, the headline grabbers—but just ordinary people like you and I have tried all the "formalities", and "legalities", the "niceness", the "politeness", the "rationalities", and it has resulted in one big fat "zero" for all of us!

Our elected officials, beginning with Governor Thornburgh right down the line to our local officials have "sold us out!" They in NO WAY have represented our best interests. The general public was and is most definitely against venting krypton into the atmosphere but all the pleas to each respective local government, except for a few municipalities, and the requests to the State Officials were completely ignored (excluding Rep. Ertel). And—fellow citizens—because of this precedent, all of your future pleas; including the reopening of TMI - Unit I and/or Unit II will also be ignored!

The Nuclear Industry (utilities, NRC, Big Business, local, State and Federal Government, etc.) is on a "lunatic fringe" and if each and every concerned citizen does not get all the way out on the other end of the "lunatic fringe" (which is the only language they understand), we are doomed to the choices the Nuclear Industry is making for our lives and the lives of our children. We have no political clout and no money, but we have one thing they do not have—numbers! If every single concerned person joins forces and demands to be counted—we will be counted. Don't think that the organizations, the man down the street or your next-door neighbor can do it for you—we need all of you in force together!

This battle is like a teeter-totter — if somebody is down here on this end and you want to bring the other end of the teeter-totter down, you don't get in the middle of the fulcrum. You have to get out there at the other end.

Joan Fisher
Etters

Dear Editor:

We have been a subscriber to your newspaper for a few years and were quite impressed with the size newspaper you put out.

It is so refreshing to know there is a publication dedicated solely to the agricultural field. Situated between two giant metropolises, Philadelphia in the east and Pittsburgh in the west, is a vast area of agriculture as diversified in agricultural enterprises as any state in the union. I think the agricultural community should have no boundaries and that is what has prompted us to write this letter

We live in Lower Northumberland County bordering Schuylkill, Dauphin, Perry and Snyder counties. Many in this area are subscribers to your publication. Whenever districting is mention we are termed North Central, here in our county, Dauphin is South Central, and Schuylkill is East. Yet we all do business with the same business people, we share meetings for the same knowledge but somehow Northumberland County gets no recognition for their achievements in the ag. field.

We kind of overlooked this peeve when our oldest son was named FFA State Star Farmer and received a limited confused acknowledgement.

But when our second son came in third in the FFA State Livestock judging contest and his name was omitted along with first place winner, that was a bit much. We feel this is discrimination and really not being fair to the public and informing them of all the winners, not just a select few.

We realize it is quite a list and does take up some space, but we feel this is what makes your paper stand out above the rest.

KILE entry deadline approaching

HARRISBURG — Any livestock people who are interested in showing at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition, to be held from October 2-7, should keep in mind the deadline for entries is August 31.

Besides the new date for the show, another new addition to the state's only international livestock event is the feeder pig show and sale on Friday, October 3.

Sheep producers will be happy to learn there will be a national Merino show on Monday, October 6 and a Dorset bred ewe sale on Saturday, October 4.

In the cattle category, Simmental breeding cattle will be included for the first time in the show schedule. And there will be a Chianina sale following the steer show on October 4.

A Paint horse sale will follow the breed show on October 4

These events will fall in line with the show's standard events like the national 4-H Roundup and Horse Bowl, and the crowning of the Lamb and Wool Queen and Suffolk Queen.

The Keystone show will provide a good show schedule for livestock exhibitors The new date will fall directly behind the Eastern National at Timonium and the Atlantic Rural, Virginia's major show. From Harrisburg, it will be a direct show circuit to Louisville.

One disappointment for some of the livestock producers and spectators will be the elimination of the breeding swine show due to the pseudorabies outbreak in the state.

But the KILE committee is trying to make up for that loss by putting on a top-notch show, one month earlier this year.

Del-Mar-Penn Goat Club meets Sunday

OXFORD — Del-Mar-Penn Goat Club will meet Sunday, June 22 from 2-4 p.m. at the home of Elaine Staunton, Avondale. Molly Brewer, Dick Stonebach and Danny Weinstock, all veterinarians practicing in Chester County will be on hand to answer questions from the group.

Guests are invited. Refreshments will be served. For more information and directions to the event, call Joyce Tuffey 215/932-4528.

conditions have impeded its development.

Yocum just received word that instances of blue mold sporulation was detected this week on plants taken from seedbeds into fields in neighboring Maryland There have been no indications of healthy plants contracting it.

In Lancaster County, early symptoms of blue mold were found in seedbeds in the Christiana and Bird-in-Hand areas But the Leola-Leacock finding was the first clear visibile evidence of the sporulation.

From all indications, county growers largely did a good job of spraying in seedbeds, according to Lueck. Also, approximately 4,000 acres of tobacco ground – about one-third of total county acreage – has been treated with Ridomil, a systemic fungicide which is applied to the soil before transplanting. Introduced just this year, all available supplies of the fungicide were used.

While growers will be keeping an eye on their fields, researchers such as Yocum will be concentrating attention on their research plots.

"There are some indications that there may be a new strain of blue mold that grows and develops at higher temperatures," Yocum said.

"Here at the Research Lab, we'll be planting eight different varieties of tobacco in research plots. Each of the varieties is susceptible to a different strain of blue mold. Similar plantings will be made in Maryland and the Carolinas.

"If there is a new strain of blue mold these test plots will help identify it and confirm whether it really does exist."

The existing strain of blue mold prospers at temperatures in the 60's primarily and does not grow when readings move in the 70's.

But this possible new strain may develop and grow in temperatures as high as the 80's and near 90 degrees.

Harvest season opens with barley

BROWNSTOWN — If the opening of the combining season this week in early barley is any indication, this year's overall harvest should be more bountiful than the past few.

But while the small grains are generally reported in good condition and barley yields are higher, later crops will depend on the weather leading up to their harvest.

Emery Hoover, custom combiner of R1 Leola, moved into some Barsoy barley along Rt. 772 between Brownstown and Leola earlier this week. It marked the opening of his harvesting season.

"This is the best crop we've had in the past four years," according to David Martin, R1 Bird-in-Hand, owner of the crop.

"The yield is running about 85 bushels to the acre.

"We were surprised but most of it was standing real well. In spite of all the wind and heavy rain, there were only a few spots where it lodged."

Martin has some Pennrad barley, which looks equally good, and should be ready for cutting during the coming week.

"Our wheat is coming along, too, and should be ready within the next couple of weeks," Martin added.

While most of his corn was at least knee-high, there is quite a bit of corn a lot smaller due to rain-delayed planting.

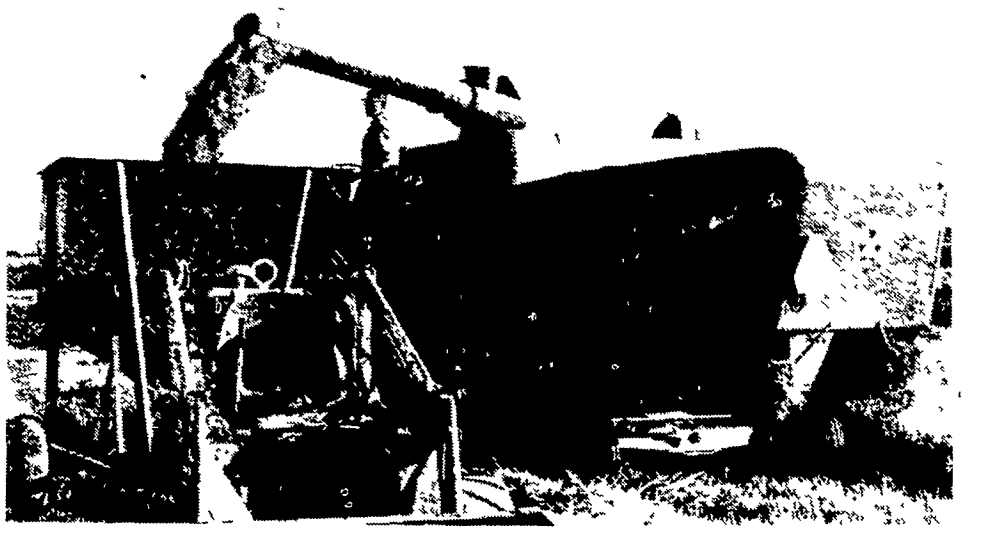
Eighty-bushel barley yields are about double many of the amounts taken from fields last year. The majority of wheat in the area is better than it was at this stage last year, too.

While a good bit of late-planted corn is behind schedule, it won't take long for it to catch up if a sizable spell of hot humid weather moves in.

Tobacco and soybeans are also lagging at this point, but a change in the weather could also boost them along

Transplanting conditions were not ideal this year for tobacco. Many growers got their plants into the fields during a period of hot dry winds and low humidity. Many leaves were killed off, leaving only the heart of the plant. With the following cool weather, the heart of the plant hasn't made much progress toward new growth.—DA

Harvesting panorama, present and future, is depicted in fields located between Brownstown and Leola, Lancaster County. While combine moves through some barley in the background, the foreground contains corn crop that's better than knee-high and a strip of wheat in between, which should be ready within a couple of weeks.



Custom combiner Emery Hoover, R1 Leola, watches Barsoy barley gushing from combine auger into grain cart. Yield was running about 85 bushels to the acre, much better than the past few years.

How local farmland values rose

LANCASTER — During the 12 months from February 1, 1979 to February 1, 1980, U.S. farmland values have increased an average of 14 percent, according to recently released USDA statistics. However, continued tight credit and moderate interest rates are expected to moderate price increases during 1980.

Farm real estate values more than doubled in 12 states between 1975 and 1980.

These states were Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota, Delaware, Maryland, and Colorado.

Since 1975 farm real estate values have increased by an annual average of 14 percent for the 12-month period ending in February, ranging from a low of 9 percent for the year ending February 1978 to 17 percent for the year ending February 1977.

Eastern

also urges members to call the Co-op and voice their support of Stanley Korona, who was elected President at the Co-op's annual meeting two weeks ago.

Supporters of the advertising campaign say they are fed up with the reblends and assessments which have clouded the Co-op's financial history in the past several years.

Korona's supporters say they feel a show of broad-based backing for the new President will strengthen his hand when he presents his reform measures at the Board meeting.

In the ads members are urged to contact Lisle Dutton rather than the Co-op's General Manager Howard McDonald.

Korona said he feels it is important the Co-op be on its way to sound financial footing by the October delegate meeting.

He said he was unwilling to blame current problems on any one person but added, "We must take some drastic steps."

He said members have indicated they are willing to stay with the Co-op as long as the current and past financial history is cleared up.

"If it takes firing some people, the members are saying they will support it," Korona concluded.

Indeed, if the sentiments expressed this week by a number of Eastern members are indicative of the Co-op as a whole; such change would be welcomed by many members.

Korona said he is making it his job to see the Co-op does embark upon a period of financial stability.

Meanwhile, efforts by Eastern to force non-members shipping to the South Waverly plant to join the Co-op continue.

But two cooperatives have indicated they are willing to take members and milk in the area.

Lehigh Valley Cooperative Vice President John York said the Co-op "needs more milk" and said Lehigh had "an open door" to any farmer with proper quality, location, and volume.

Lehigh has been building three pockets of milk in the northeast. One, with 60 to 70 shippers, is near Marathon, N.Y., he continued.

A second is in Bradford and Susquehanna Counties, near Towanda. The third is in Wayne County near Waymart.

York, in charge of Lehigh's member relations, said "If anybody in that area wants to talk with me, I'd be glad to talk to them.

"We need to develop an additional supply of milk from producers who will open their doors to Lehigh," he stated.

Inter-State Milk Producers, while not mounting a concentrated recruiting campaign, said it would not refuse to talk to anyone who meets its sanitation requirements.

"If farmers in the area request a market and have the quality for the market, we would look at them," said Inter-State's Boyd Gartley.

Inter-State currently has other Order II shippers. While it would be uneconomical for any co-op to pick up an isolated shipper, Inter-State indicated it was the co-op's purpose to pick up good dairymen seeking a market.

Winter wheat yields up

HARRISBURG — Based on June 1 conditions, the Commonwealth's winter wheat crop is expected to produce 8.25 million bushels from an indicated 250,000 acres, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service. If realized, this will be two percent above last year's production. Yield is expected to average 33 bushels per acre.

Peach production in Pennsylvania is forecast at 105 million pounds, 17 percent above last year's production.

At the United States level, winter wheat production is forecast at a record high 1.76 million bushels, nine percent greater than last year and three percent above last month's forecast.

Peach production in the United States is forecast at 2.88 billion pounds, three percent below last season but seven percent above the 1978 harvest. The California clingstone peach crop is expected to total 1.32 billion pounds, six percent less than last year but seven percent more than 1978.

Sweet cherry production in the six western states is expected to total 147,000 tons, four percent less than last year but 27 percent above the 1978 crop.

Pork producers put Harvey on team

DES MOINES, Ia. — sponding to SOS calls om its members, the tional Pork Producers uncil has authorized the iggest, strongest, longest" rk advertising campaign its 13-year history.

The Council's exciting new oject will establish three firsts'' for the ganization: The Council ll use a "big name" okesman for pork, Paul rvey. It will buy its first tionwide radio network. nd the campaign will run ery week for a full year.

State President Abe Fisher commented that "we've all known that the only sure way to climb out of our red ink situation is to put pork on more family tables more often. Paul Harvey not only reaches the biggest audience in network radio, but he is a fighter for what is right, and his listeners are unusually loyal. When this man puts his personal endorsement on pork, week after week, he'll sell pork."

NPPC officials point out that Harvey talks to more than eleven million people each day; that ABC's 850 stations cover not only the nation's big-city areas, but most of the rural sectors and small towns as well; that Harvey will personally deliver pork commercials and his endorsement "live" throughout the year.

Here in Pennsylvania, consumers and producers will be able to hear Paul Harvey on 25 stations, including WHOL, Allentown; WRTA, Altoona; WBVP, Beaver Falls; WGPA, Bethlehem; WKAD (FM), Canton; WCDL-FM, Carbondale; WVCH, Chester; WCPA, Clearfield; WCVI, Connellsville; WRIE, Erie; WSKE, Everett; WCMB, Harrisburg; WDNH, Honesdale; WWBR, Johnstown; WGSA/WIOV (FM), Lancaster; WLAN, Lancaster; WKVA, Lewistown; WMGW, Meadville; WKST, New Castle; WRCP, Philadelphia; WWSW, Pittsburgh; WEEU, Reading; WILK, Wilkes-Barre; WMPT, Williamsport; and WNOW, York.

NPPC's President Bill Buller notes that "a Harvey sponsorship opens up very rarely. We had been looking for a really big lever to start our hog-price cycle up hill. Harvey can do that for us. With the best known 'name' on the air, with the largest audience, and with a superb sales pitch, this man will boost pork consumption. Frankly, I think that his identity with pork, coupled with his persistent battle against waste and foolishness in government, can also be helpful to us as we tussle with goofy regulations, unsupported dietary directions and such. If you are not already a Harvey fan, you will be when you hear him sending shoppers to the store for pork."

The pork campaign will start in early August, on a weekly basis, with the commercials rotating through Harvey's morning newscast, his mid-day show, and his early-evening commentary.

Supreme Court decision on irrigation 'OK' with Farm Bureau

WASHINGTON, D.C. — n Tuesday, the president of e American Farm Bureau ederation called a animous U.S. Supreme urt water-use decision a gnificant victory in Farm ureau's battle against reage limitations on ureau of Reclamation rigation projects.

The high court ruling versed a 9th Circuit U.S. urt of Appeals decision of 77 limiting ownership in e Imperial Valley of lifornia to 160 acres that uld be irrigated from a ureau of Reclamation oject.

Robert B. Delano, AFBF esident, said that while the preme Court's decision plied only to the Imperial lley, it is unknown at this me if the decision will rectly impact all of the me 11 million acres rigated by Reclamation ojects in the 17 Western ates.

The farm leader said reage limitations on land irrigated from federal projects has been at issue ever since Secretary of Interior Cecil Andrus, nearly three years ago, announced intentions to enforce the Reclamation Act of 1902. The Act limited ownership of Reclamation project land to 160 acres and required the owner to live on or near the land irrigated by the project.

"The Reclamation Act of 1902 — even with subsequent amendments — is completely inconsistent with today's farming technology and production costs," Delano said.

"Farm Bureau has specificially supported repeal of provisions of the Act and has contested proposed regulations that relate to acreage limitations, residency requirements, leasing provisions, direct lineage ownership restrictions and use of a lottery to dispose of excess land," Delano said, adding that the Supreme Court decision is an incentive for Farm Bureau to intensify its efforts to modernize the Reclamation Act.

JUNE IS DAIRY MONTH

WE AT PENN-JERSEY WANT DAIRY FARMERS TO KNOW WE CARE AND RECOGNIZE THEIR HARD WORK AND DEVOTION!

HOW IMPORTANT IS AGRICULTURE TO OUR COUNTRY?

NATION'S #1 INDUSTRY

Ag assets are equal to 80% of the capital assets of all manufacturing corporations in the U.S.

NATION'S #1 INFLATION FIGHTER

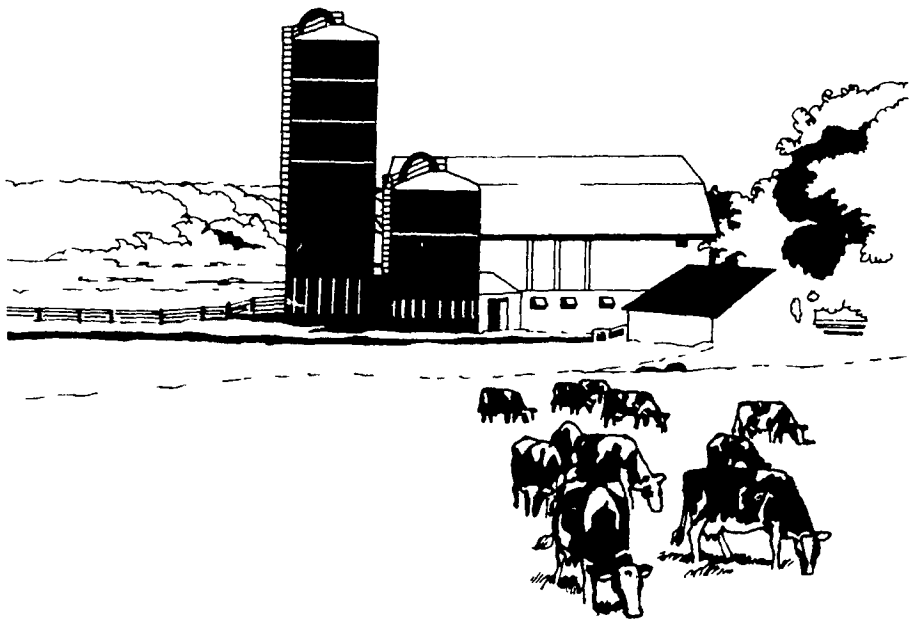
Rate of productivity is double that of non-farm industry. One farm worker supplies today what three workers did 20 years ago.

NATION'S #1 EMPLOYER

14-17 million people work in some phase of agriculture — 1 out of every 5 jobs in private enterprise.

NATION'S #1 EXPORTER

Ag exports totaled $32 billion in 1979 — by far the leading factor in the U.S. balance of trade. We have less than 7% of the world's land, but the U.S. produces 48% of the world's corn plus 65% of coarse grain exports.



AN AVERAGE U.S. FACTORY WORKER CAN BUY 2.5 TIMES MORE FOOD WITH AN HOUR'S WORK IN 1980 THAN 1950!

LET'S ALL SUPPORT & RESPECT OUR AMERICAN FARMERS . . . THEY ARE THE BEST!

To Better Equipment... Find It In Lancaster Farming's CLASSIFIEDS!

'Five years ago, when we chose the diesel engines to power our 750-acre irrigation system, fuel economy was what we were looking for and we looked at a lot of engines The Deutz diesel was by far the best on that score Other Deutz users told us they had cut their fuel bill by about 25 percent—we've done better than that They also said the separate air-cooled cylinders on a Deutz are very easy to service I couldn't tell you about that—we've never had to repair one"—Bill Bontrager, Operations Manager Estrella River Properties, Ltd , Paso Robles, Ca

Deutz engines consume less fuel simply because their advanced design makes them more efficient They run at higher head temperatures and make better use of the fuel They are more dependable, longer-running because of their solid quality and superior cooling system About half the causes of downtime in liquid-cooled engines are attributable to breakdowns in the cooling system In air-cooled Deutz diesels, there can be no freeze-ups or boil-overs, no broken water hoses, no water-pump failures, no cavitation, none of the problems liquid-cooled engines are heir to

Throughout the world, wherever the going is toughest, Deutz air-cooled diesels are going strong

Fourth in a series of interviews with Glenn Shirk

Is your dairy in trouble?

BY PAT KAUFFMAN

LANCASTER — In preceding weeks we have looked with Lancaster dairy agent, Glenn Shirk at what makes an outstanding dairyman, dairy management, and routes for young dairymen to take. Today we are looking at the dairy in trouble.

According to Glenn, with inflation increasing faster than the price of milk, those heavily borrowed and financially overcommitted are being killed by the high interest rates. Glenn, how do they know their dairy is in trouble?

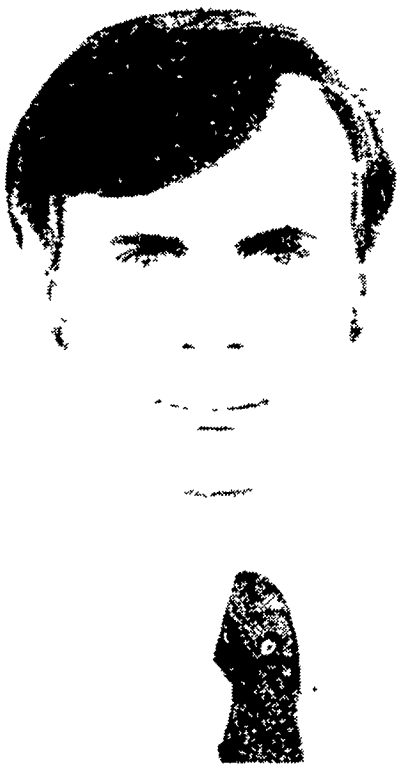
I think, Pat, that while this can be obvious to some, there are many who are in trouble and perhaps don't realize it. Perhaps the dairyman should ask himself several questions

For instance, is his production satisfactory? Are he and his family physically and emotionally fatigued? Is he enjoying it and is he timely meeting the goals he has set for the business and his family? Is he behind on payments or financially strapped?

Even if the operation is in trouble, there's usually hope. However, some families can most be helped by getting out of dairying

Some fellows stubbornly hang in there and are dragged down hill farther when there's really no way out And others recognize the eventuality of their situation but are afraid to face the reality of finding other employment and making the necessary steps involved in getting out of dairying. They wrestle with fear of the future and with the stigma they feel such a move bears

I think when the situation indicates, it's best to get out while the getting is good and you still have something left.



Glenn, what are the methods to use if you recognize your operation is in trouble and feel that it's wise to continue dairying?

I think the first that comes to mind is usually to attempt negotiating partial payments. Where this is not possible, the next step is often refinancing. But this needs to be looked at carefully.

"Failure to allow flexibility helped cause his problems..."

Many times refinancing is done on a short term note to avoid the higher interest over the term of a longer note. Care must be taken not to overextend on short term notes

While it will cost more in the long run on a longer note, the dairyman needs working capital now It's important that he understands what he is doing — managing his way out of difficulty — and that he utilizes sound management tools such as planning flexibility into his program

He must ask himself if he can still meet the notes if inflation increases and his milk check does not Has he allowed breathing room for family emergencies? Frequently it's a lack of flexibility that got him in trouble in the first place

Another application of managing in a crisis by using flexibility is sliding by in a pinch with reduced fertilization costs in a slim year. If the soil is reasonably fertile, and depending on the crops, a dairyman can within reason reduce some of his overhead by cutting back a certain amount in this area.

If the dairyman is big enough to get into reduction, this might be the right way to go For instance if the dairyman with 60 cows hits hard times, it may be sensible to sell off part of the milking herd, a good culling technique. This also generates immediate income and can in some instances size the herd to the amount of feed available from the farm that year This can reduce the expenditure for off-farm feed.

Using this reduction technique, he also allows himself extra time to manage the animals left in the herd to best advantage He gives himself more time to plan his business moves.

For some individuals, liquidation of the milking herd may temporarily bail the operation out and allow the dairyman time to devote to the essential problems If he retains his young stock, he still allows himself the ability to build his operation again as his heifers freshen.

The temptation to get an off-farm job deserves extreme caution It may be compatible But if it jeopardizes production and performance, the dairyman is heading in the wrong direction

In certain cases, if the land is large enough to support more cows and the labor is available, it may be wise to spend a little more money for cheap housing for more milking cows and milk in shifts.

If the dairyman can get more cowpower with a minimal monetary investment, realizing that it will be inconvenient, the extra time spent to handle the extra cows may be the time that gives him his greatest return In this method, he can calve out a few more heifers, maybe even bring in a few more cows, and erect a cheap shed or lean-to for housing

And in some instances with the high value of real estate, dairymen liquidate their operations here and reinvest in an operation elsewhere. The dairyman must look at this move cautiously.

Cheaper land may not be as productive The quality and the length of the growing season may differ He must look into the agricultural support services such as feed stores and milk markets In spite of the low cost, cheap land could prove very expensive.

It's also important for the dairyman who considers this technique to look carefully before he makes his move at the tax consequences First impression benefits can be quickly erased by tax liabilities

Along that same line, the dairyman could also sell out the farm but retain his cattle and equipment and rent facilities until his operation is providing enough income to once again invest in land.

The important thing, Pat, is that failure to allow flexibility helped cause his problems So the dairyman must take stock of his situation and apply good dairy management to work his way out of his problems.

In next week's installment, we'll look at the dairyman's hired help and employees. Where can he find them, and how can he keep them?

...the dairyman must take stock of his situation...

...and apply good dairy management to work his way out of his problems."

N.Y.-N.J. May milk pegged at $11.90

NEW YORK, N.Y — Dairy farmers supplying milk plants regulated under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders during May will be paid on the basis of a uniform price of $11.90 per hundred pounds or 25.6 cents per quart.

Market Administrator Thomas A. Wilson, who announced May's price, also stated that the uniform farm price was $11.96 per hundredweight in April 1980 and $10 93 per hundredweight in May 1979. The uniform price is a marketwide weighted average of the value of farm milk used for fluid and manufactured dairy products.

The seasonal incentive funds removed $.40 per hundredweight from the dairy farmers' uniform price for May, for a total of $3,970,831.70. Deductions for this fund will continue through June and will be returned in the August through November uniform price calculations

The total amount of milk received from the 17,530 dairy farmers supplying the New York-New Jersey Marketing Area was 992,707,924 pounds during May 1980. This was more than 27 8 million pounds above last year The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries was $119,595,826.69. Wilson explained this included differentials required to be paid to dairy farmers but not voluntary premiums or deductions authorized by the farmer.

Regulated milk dealers utilized 393,385,841 pounds or 39.6 percent of the total amount of milk for Class I The Class I milk is used for fluid milk products such as homogenized, flavored, low-test and skim milks

For May 1980, handlers paid $13.84 per hundredweight, or 29.8 cents per quart, for the milk used in Class I products compared with $12.84 a year ago.

The balance of the milk, 60.4 percent, was used to manufacture Class II products including butter, cheese, ice cream and yogurt. For this milk the handlers paid $11.54 per hundredweight

The uniform price is based on milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat. For May 1980, a differential of 15.7 cents was applied to the price for each one-tenth of one percent that the milk tested above or below the 3 5 percent standard

All prices quoted are for bulk tank milk received within the 201-210 mile zone from New York City

Jim Garber, Lancaster, inspects the 40 gallon galvanized range boilers which serve as the heat collectors of the passive solar water heater. A double-wall fiberglass glazing will cover the "bread box" after plumbing is completed and the tanks are painted black.

LCCD shows 'how-to's' of solar heating

LANCASTER — Approximately 95 Lancaster Countians attended two solar water heater workshops sponsored recently by the Lancaster County Conservation District.

Four units were constructed at each workshop under the supervision of Mark Whitmoyer, solar home builder and consultant.

The units are designed as "passive" systems, which heat the water before it goes to a back-up electric, gas, or oil heater. Two 40-gallon range boilers collect the solar energy, and the line pressure from the house passes the heated water through the tank.

Passive solar water heaters have been around since the early 1900's, and in general are more efficient than active systems which use an anti-freeze liquid through a copper collector, a circulator, and a heat exchanger. In addition, a passive system is less expensive and easier to install than an active system, according to LCCD Administrator Tom Johnston.

Those who have built solar water heaters at the workshops have given reports of average water temperature of 110° to 120° F on normal sunny days

Designed primarily to provide for domestic household hot water, the system does have some applicability, to agriculture, according to Johnston. Johnston said he is optimistic that farrowing houses with hot water heat in the floor, greenhouses, and small dairy operations could benefit from this system. He added he would be willing to work with farmers to help adapt a passive solar water heater to their farming operations.

USDA drops rates on loans

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has agreed to lower rates charged for emergency loans to financially pressed farmers under the Economic Emergency Assistance loan program from 14 per cent to 11.5 per cent, effective Monday, June 16.

The decision is a victory for congressmen who have been pressing for lower interest rates under the program, arguing that USDA was over-charging farmers for the loans

Interest rates under the program are supposed to be pegged to the cost of government borrowing, plus about one per cent to cover administrative expenses. After government borrowing costs began to rise in March, the rate was promptly raised in April from 11 per cent to 14 per cent

The USDA has continued to charge 14 per cent for the loans, even though government borrowing costs have been steadily decreasing since early April. In May, for example, the average cost was just 10.3 per cent.

Iowa Congressman Tom Harkin said he welcomed the decision, but added he was disturbed that it came so late. "If the economists at the USDA were really looking out for the farmer they would have lowered these rates two months ago," Harkin said.

He said he will continue to monitor the program and will press for further reductions in the interest rate if government borrowing costs continue to decline.

Don't blend ethanol with regular gasoline

UNIVERSITY PARK — should not be mixed with Homemade ethanol alcohol gasoline for motor fuel, according to agricultural engineers at Penn State

Such alcohol, as commonly distilled, will always contain at least 5 per cent water and probably more, says Kermit Q Stephenson of the agricultural engineering faculty The alcohol and water separate from the gasoline, resulting in irregular engine performance and stalling, Stephenson claimed The result is what chemists call "phase separation "

The water can also damage engines by creating rust and corrosion with time

Stephenson and associates experienced "phase separation" when using gasoline with 190 and 180 proof ethanol, five per cent and 10 per cent water respectively.

"Ethanol with five per cent or more water will require modifications in fuel system such as separate fuel supplies and higher than normal intake manifold temperatures," Stephenson stated

"In addition, fuel consumption can be expected to increase as the heat content of the mixture decreases and water content of the ethanol increases," he added

Thermal efficiency, an engine's ability to convert heat content of the fuel to useful mechanical output, tends to increase slightly with increased proportions of ethanol, the experiments found However, thermal efficiency decreased with increased proportions of water in ethanol-gasoline blends

Stephenson and Garthe tested alcohol fuel blends in a small, single-cylinder, air-cooled gasoline engine. Ethyl alcohol was used in various blends with gasoline, as well as straight ethanol, and with five and 10 per cent water content

The engine operated satisfactorily with water-free ethanol at 25 to 50 per cent by volume mixtures with both regular and unleaded gasoline. However, starting difficulties occurred with higher percentages of ethanol, at room temperature, when the engine was cold

The Penn Staters report that blending of nine parts unleaded gasoline to one part water-free ethanol works fine as "gasohol." No engine modifications are needed to burn "gasohol," research at Penn State and elsewhere found

"The cost of alcohol is related to its water content," Stephenson commented, "since removal of water by distallation is an extra process using considerable energy."

"Water tolerance and engine modifications needed for satisfactory performance will determine the degree of refinement, and cost, for fuel-grade alcohol," he affirmed.

The engine used in the experiments was mounted for stationary tests. It was coupled to a calibrated, magnetic-particle brake dynamometer for loading (simulated pulling) purposes All tests were conducted indoors at room temperature Atmospheric conditions were recorded for standardizing the results.

Stephenson pointed out that renewable sources of alcohol fuels are important to agriculture, both from the standpoint of producing the raw material and the end use in trucks, tractors, and combines

Stillwagen wins "Sound Off for Agriculture"

SCHNECKSVILLE — Frederic H. Stillwagen, vocational agriculture teacher in the Lehigh Co. Vo-Tech school at Schnecksville, has been named the state winner of the 1980 National Vocational Agricultural Teachers' Assoc. - Elanco Products Company "Sound Off For Agriculture" award for Pennsylvania.

The award, sponsored by Elanco Products Company, Indianapolis, Indiana in cooperation with the National Vocational Agricultural Teachers' Association, Alexandria, Virginia, recognizes vocational agriculture teachers who promote agriculture to the non-farm community via public relations activities and publicity throughout the year, plus activities conducted in conjunction with American Agriculture Day

"Agriculture Day was conceived by those who recognized a need for better facts about agriculture among urban consumers. It provided an opportunity to tell how ranchers, farmers, and growers contribute to America's strength and well-being. "Agriculture Day" has become a national event.

The vocational agriculture teacher was selected as a vital local link in promoting the national recognition day for agriculture. They promote agriculture in the local school and community through various classroom and FFA programs, activities and contests.

A criteria to winning the "Sound Off For Agriculture" award is that the program must include activities conducted within a week of "Agriculture Day." It must be directed to the urban people within the community, not those in the agricultural populace.

The "Sound Off For Agriculture" award application of state winners, including Stillwagen's entry, will be evaluated by special NVATA Selection Committees June 15 Six regional winners will be named. The regional winners will be announced July 1.

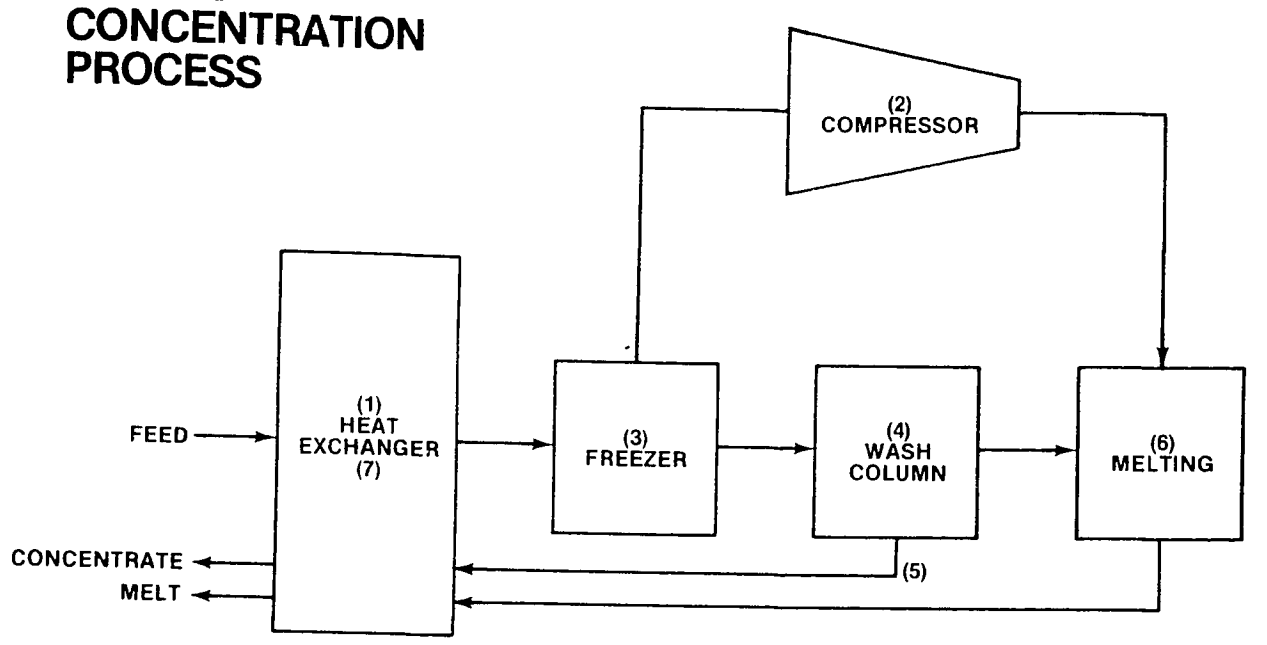
FREEZE CONCENTRATION PROCESS



(1) Whey (or milk) enters and is cooled to pre freezing temperature
(2) Compressor reduces pressure in freezer
(3) Some of the water in cold whey vaporizes, drawing heat from remaining water which freezes
(4) Ice crystals and condensed whey separated by pumping mixture up from base of column Ice compacted and removed at top
(5) Concentrated whey flows to heat exchanger
(6) Ice melted by compressor's heat
(7) Cold condensed whey and cold water used to cool whey entering system

New freeze process to cut energy costs

LANCASTER — Dairy Research Inc and 14 major dairy cooperatives from across the U S recently formed a joint venture to develop freeze concentration processes and equipment for dairy products Freeze concentration is a potentially energy-efficient method of removing water from whey and milk.

DRINC initiated the joint venture concept to extend the impact of research dollars. DRINC is the dairy industry's product and process research and development organization.

The dairy cooperative partners, include NEDCO, Maryland & Virginia Milk Producers Assn., Milk Marketing Inc., Land O'Lakes and others.

DRINC estimates freeze concentration could cut their energy costs a minimum of 45 percent.

The joint venture partnership, called Dairy Venture I, has total initial capitalization of $400,000. DRINC has invested $100,000 in the project; cooperatives commitments range from $10,000 to $50,000 each.

Freeze concentration is basically the same for sea water, whey, milk or any other water-based solution: part of the water is removed by turning it to ice crystals. Whey, a by-product of cheesemaking, is 94 percent water because most of the milk's solids have gone into the cheese Before liquid whey is transported or dried, it is concentrated to save energy. Freeze concentration, potentially, uses less energy than existing processes due to recent advances in techniques and equipment.

In the system to be developed, raw whey is first chilled to pre-freezing temperature in a heat exchanger. It then enters the freezer, where under lowered pressure, some of the water in the whey vaporizes, drawing heat from the liquid. This heat loss causes part of the remaining water to freeze

The resulting mixture of ice crystals and concentrated whey is pumped through the bottom of a wash column in which the ice crystals are compacted by the upward pressure and the concentrated whey is drained off. The ice crystals are removed and melted. The resulting cold water and concentrated whey flow separately to the heat exchanger, chilling the entering raw whey.

Freeze concentration's energy savings are due to the small changes in temperature required in each step in the process On the basis of 1979 prices for oil and electricity, a plant using freeze concentration to process one million pounds of raw whey a day could save about $300,000 a year. If oil prices rise as expected, the savings could be even greater.

DRINC estimates that if freeze concentration were used industry-wide, whey processors could save a minimum of $15 million a year, based on 1979 costs, and milk and whey processors together could save $38 million.

The low temperatures used in the process could produce other benefits for the dairy industry The quality of heat-sensitive products would be protected, and equipment would need cleaning and replacement less often because there would be little corrosion or fouling.

If the project is successful, equipment could be operating in plants within three years. Dairy Venture I and CSI hope to market the technology world-wide.

From its formation in 1971 to 1979, DRINC has funded 47 commercial development projects and 48 basic research projects. As an operating arm of UDIA, DRINC is financed by dairy farmers and processors. UDIA and its other operating arms, American Dairy Association and National Dairy Council, conduct a total promotion program to increase sales of U.S.-produced milk and dairy products.

DRINC chose freeze concentration for the first joint venture because the project has excellent possibilities for success, would be too costly for one organization to finance, and is of special interest to processors presently concentrating dairy products.

Farm alcohol fuel workshops begin

MARSHALL, Mn. — Three alcohol fuel workshops are scheduled this summer at Southwest State University and the Canby Area Vocational-Technical Institute dealing with production processes and the utilization of alcohol fuels in spark ignition and diesel engines.

Southwest State University and the Canby and Granite Falls AVTI's have been designated as the North Central Alcohol Fuel Training Center by the U.S. Department of Energy and are co-sponsoring the workshops as the Energies Education Institute.

Production process workshops will be held at Southwest State University June 23-26 and July 7-10, and a mechanics workshop is scheduled July 7-8 at the Canby AVTI

Production workshops will provide an opportunity to observe a number of farm-size alcohol plants currently in operation in the area as well as firsthand experience in cooking, fermentation and distillation labs Topics will include energy requirements, plant design and federal Bureau of Alcohol-Tobacco-Firearms regulations.

There will be an opportunity to work in diesel engine and gasoline engine laboratory settings and observe some current developments in cellulose conversion techniques The economics of an alcohol plant operation and by-product uses will also be a part of the curriculum

Cost of the process workshops is $250 (including meals, instructional materials and tours), and pre-registration one week prior to the start of each of the workshops is requested with the Energies Education Institute, Adult and Continuing Education, Southwest State University, Marshall, Minn. 56258 (507/537-6252)

The mechanics workshop at the Canby AVTI on July 7-8 will provide experience in working with the modifications necessary to utilize alcohol fuels and will provide 10 hours of instruction on both spark ignition and diesel engines. Cost is $100 (including meals and all lab and instructional materials), and pre-registration is requested by June 30 with the Energies Education Institute, Adult and Continuing Education, Southwest State University, Marshall Minn 56258 (507/537-6252)

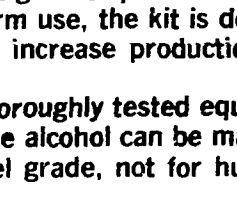
the pumper

From Victory Stills the people who brought you the first home mini still now has another breakthrough for motor fuel dubbed "THE PUMPER".

This do-it-yourself motor fuel still kit is available nationwide.

$300 INTRODUCTORY OFFER
Dealer Inquiries Invited



In kit form, we save certain costs which makes our still very competitive. It is an all copper pre-engineered reflux column and condenser, designed to produce 1 gallon or more of fuel alcohol at 180 proof, per hour. Ideal for Farm use, the kit is designed to attach to any drum from 20 gallons plus, capacity. For increase production several "PUMPERS" can be attached to one cooking vessel.

Anyone who ever thought of building a still now has thoroughly tested equipment to use. In a 24 hour period, a sufficient amount of fuel grade alcohol can be made to run your auto all week. Or mix it for GASOHOL. This is fuel grade, not for human consumption.

Although building a still required no Federal permit, operating one does. But fear not the REVENOOERS, permit applications are included.

THE "PUMPER" KIT INCLUDES	WHAT TO USE
Pre-engineered kit to adapt readily to any distillation vessel	Starchy vegetable leftovers
Instructions for assembly	Spoiled fruits & vegetables
Yeast and enzyme packs	Grains-Corn Potatoes
Brown's Alcohol Motor Fuel Cookbook	Starches - sugars
	Many plants - grasses - trees

What is left after distillation is a high protein animal feed.

He operates his grandfather's truck farm

David Hess has picked his dream

Some people have a fond dream of someday having a beautiful, well-cared for, productive garden in their backyard. Others dream of the day when they can retire from the city or suburbs to a nice little farm of their own.

Whether one's dream is that of the picture postcard garden or the neat little farm, one may find the experiences that the David and Glenn Hess families have shared to be both eye-opening as far as facts are concerned and encouraging as far as a spirit of enthusiasm is concerned in such dreams becoming realities.

While neither generation of Hesses fits the description of the transplanted city dweller or retired suburbanite, they do know what it is like to take hold of a dream – or rather to let the dream take hold of them – to own a working farm, with garden produce as part of its basic source of income.

The younger Hess, David, and his wife, Linda, and his parents Glenn and Wanda Hess decided four years ago that David's wish to be a farmer should have a chance to come true. David had worked over the years at his grandfather's farm near Mt. Nebo, Lancaster County.

His grandfather raised produce and sold it at market four days a week. He had told him that he remembered taking produce to market with a horse and wagon to the square in Lancaster many years before.

David's parents however, were not farmers. His mother and father and other family members helped with the catering service his mother operated in the Quarryville-Coatesville areas. While he attended Solanco High School, David worked for Howard Groff feeding steers for several years. Then he worked for his grandfather on the produce farm for three years after graduation. David then worked for his mother for three years in the catering business.

Then David's grandfather stopped farming himself. And after two months, the new operator left his grandfather's farm so David and his parents stepped in to finish out the season. David said, "Renting is okay, but I really wanted to own a place of my own."

For the last four years David and his wife, a registered nurse who works at a Lancaster City Hospital, and his father and mother have banded together their resources, both financial and labor, to operate the 104 acre farm along Conowingo Road in Southern Lancaster County.

"The location is perfect," David explained in his typically enthusiastic style. "It is not too far away from where Dad lives so he doesn't have far to come each day and we are close enough to help out with the catering."

While a friend from the Delmarva area finds the slope of the farm to resemble a bowl rather than the flat fields he is accustomed to, the Hesses have found the slope and the southern exposure and shale excellent for growing produce and hay.

Seventy of the 104 acres are tillable at present with a breakdown of twenty-five acres of hay to feed dairy heifers and sell as a cash crop and the rest in barley, field corn and garden produce. The Hesses plant all the crops, but hire custom harvest work for the field crops.

David feeds forty dairy heifers right now from the field crops. For the first four years as produce growers, David says, "We were just playing around. Now we are specializing in what we grow for market and are trying to diversify throughout the year with the dairy heifers and the veal calves."

This Spring, David started his first pen of veal calves in a newly constructed veal building. The 104 animals are contracted by Provimi Veal, a well-known buyer for Philadelphia and New York City consumers. While it is mostly David's responsibility to tend to the veal calves, except for help from time to time from his wife, David and his father have divided responsibilities as far as the produce and field crops are concerned.

David is in charge of managing the labor and marketing aspects while his father enjoys the planting and cultivating chores. David does much of the spraying in the evening after the bees are in their hives and after the veal and dairy animals are tended.

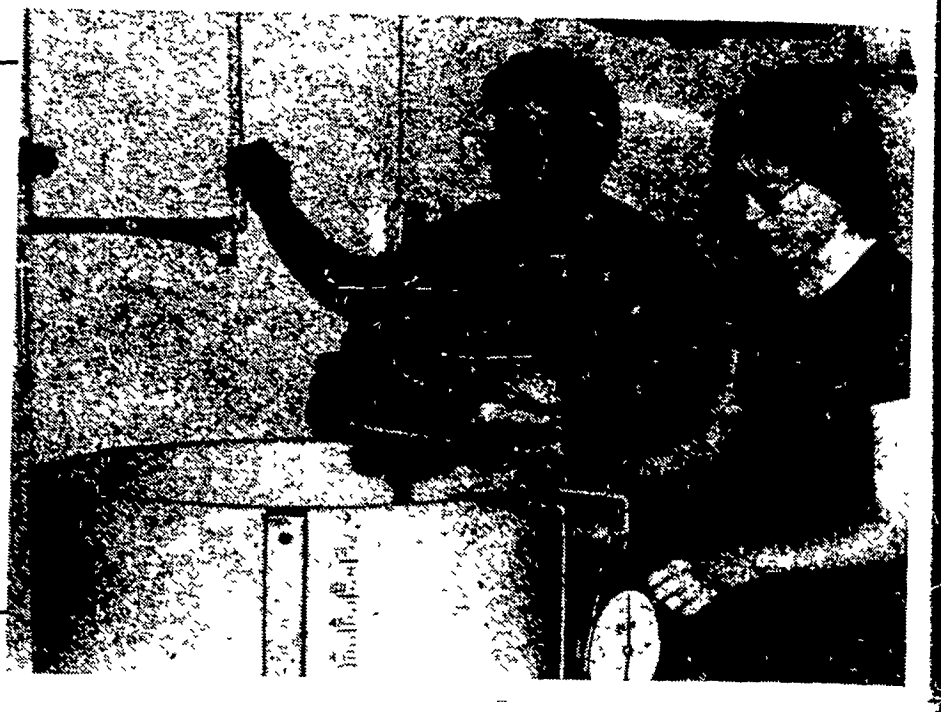
He usually puts in a long day beginning at four in the morning when he starts feeding the veal calves. Feeding takes two and one half hours in the morning and then he takes care of the dairy heifers. After breakfast he helps his father with planting then looks after the labor force harvesting strawberries or raspberries or tomatoes or whatever is in season.

As soon as possible in the early afternoon he takes the produce to a wholesaler who services the Baltimore-Washington suburban homemakers and returns in time to start the evening veal feeding by 4 p.m.

After three hours of feeding and cleaning up at the veal barn, there often remains a lot of odd jobs and spraying to do. His wife pitches in when she is home from her fulltime job at the hospital and is needed. And David's mother takes care of all the bookwork involved in both the farm and the catering business.

Both David and Glenn, his father, give credit quickly to their spouses for supporting them in this venture. David says he and his father return all the profits back into the farm operation. They are freely willing to admit that without their wives' help they could not have continued.

After hiring a farm management consultant, David said he learned a valuable lesson. He had always proceeded with caution when it came to venturing out into diversified money making projects. At first they had only the growing season and garden produce to carry them through the other months of the year. Gradually, however, after trial and error and picking up details and management practices season by season and year by year, David says he looks toward a very promising future in farming.



Linda and David Hess prepare to feed the veal calves on Saturday afternoon. Both help David's mother man the concession stand at the Buck Tractor Pull every Saturday night in the pulling season.

Glenn Hess, left, and David check the raspberry crop which should ripen next week for local pickers.

"If you really enjoy what you are doing – as much as I do farming – you will be alert to new ideas and ways of doing things. You will pick up hints along the way and stick with it," he added. "As my granfather often said, 'A slow nickel is better then a fast dime.' Some people look at what they are doing and only see the quick buck; they get in and out of projects from one to the next and never stick with anything. A steady and sure price paid for quality will be better in the long run than a top price paid out on only a few," he continued.

Hess markets his produce to a wholesaler who knows him and his produce. Quality is consistent because David watches after the pickers to make sure his standards are met. As soon as the produce is picked each morning, David trucks to the wholesaler while it is still at its peak. He does not have refrigeration because he says it is the biggest culprit there is to produce. "Once a berry is refrigerated and taken out of the cold, it rapidly loses its quality and appearance," he said.

Having enough pickers to harvest the produce at its peak of perfection is a management headache David tackles all Summer long. Most of the workforce is local help, much of it young people. He can have as many as thirty-five teenagers in the strawberry patch at one time, he said. He and his father have one acre of asparagus – they have a demand for much, much more – three acres of strawberries, four acres of cauliflower, two acres of raspberries, twelve acres of tomatoes, three acres of tobacco, fifteen acres of pumpkins, squash and Halloween pumpkins to harvest by hand.

To help ease the cost of labor, David has started you-pick advertising this year with the strawberries and raspberries. He wholesales some of both crops but sees the you-pick practice as a possible expanding labor-saving step on their farm. David calculates his you-pick price from adjusting the Philadelphia market prices, keeping in mind paid labor and container costs as well as transportation costs deducted since he is not wholesaling the items. Customers locally enjoy the price break when they go into the field and pick their own produce to suit them.

The major drawback in such a plan, David said, is getting the customers through proper timing of advertising into the patches on time. "You can't predict exactly when the crop will come into a 'glut' but you have to let the customers know a little ahead of time so that they will be ready. The weather makes a big difference with perishable items like produce," he said. "This year for instance, we sold 4,000 quarts of strawberries from the same acreage we sold only 600 quarts from last year. We had two weeks of continuous rain last year and the berries just did not keep."

"Gardeners are discouraged when they have worked all year on their plants and have a failure. Sometimes it is better to go to a farm and pick the produce rather than to invest all that time and money and still not get much for your efforts," Hess reasoned. "Cauliflower is a good example of a garden crop that often gives poor return for the home gardener," he began, "If a grower sets out 10,000 cauliflower plants he is lucky to get 6,000 heads to make and market. Cauliflower is subject to black leg and root rot and touchy about temperature for forming nice, solid white heads. One year 20,000 stalks only made 4,000 heads. It got too cold for too long too soon. The odds can be discouraging for the home gardener," he concluded.

Another aspect of produce growing which has increased the trend recently to purchase vegetables from a large scale producer rather than grow one's own produce is the effectiveness and expense involved in spraying for insects and disease and weed control. David Hess explained that although there may be several suggested effective chemicals to use for a particular problem, there may in actuality be only one which is really effective to any great extent. To use such chemicals there is a need to have a license or certification to apply it and it is usually not available in a small enough quantity to be practical for the home gardener to purchase and use. By way of example, David said the spray he uses on his cauliflower costs $90 a gallon. There is no way to break that down to amounts to use on a dozen or so plants in a home garden in a cost range that makes it sensible to use it.

With the increased transportation costs the last few years, shipped-in produce is becoming more expensive and locally grown produce has risen in favor in terms of competitive prices in some instances while machine harvested produce such as sweet corn still continues to undersell locally grown and hand-pulled corn. Consequently, David and Glenn Hess have narrowed down their produce to those items which require quick marketing such as raspberries which will mold overnight or items which are time consuming and difficult to grow in a small garden.

Since nothing is cheap anymore, people are choosing more carefully lately. "I have seen a bit change in people the last two years," he stated. David and his wife and his father and mother are hoping that specializing and maintaining quality garden produce and veal will be the answer to making David's dream of having a farm come true.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

A grass roots mumbling and grumbling for many years over the Pennsylvania workmen's compensation program is nearing a head as legislation crawls towards some kind of completion.

Fees for this insurance, which pays partial lost wages and medical benefits for on-job-injuries, are set by the state, and are the same regardless of where coverage is written. Benefits have been pretty liberal and sometimes open-ended; and we dairy farmers have been howling for years about the stiff premiums we must pay if we hire employees, over $10 for every $100 paid out in wages.

Recent personal experiences have dialed our yowling level up a couple more notches. Take this recent case in point:

Our labor books (a drastically over-inflated title for two pages of partially-filled lines) are audited annually by the state, since we insure through a state fund. Purpose of the audit of course is to make sure we render forth every penny.

On a recent day, an audit supervisor motored from a Harrisburg office to spend a maximum of five minutes copying my two dozen figures out of two columns in the farm records. (Let's hope another account was picked up on the way.) Those figures were then taken back to the Harrisburg office for further study and final workup—and the billing of additional charges if the actual payout went over the earlier wage estimates.

Second case in point. Last year's auditor drove down (after canceling the first appointment due to lack of gas) to copy down our few figures. A few days later, the phone rang. The auditor had lost the slip with the figures and totals. Would I please look them up and read them over the phone?

Good grief! Why in the world can't we simply do that to begin with—or send in photocopies of our pay records? How much gas and time and money could be saved if these auditors didn't have to run around copying down figures here and there that they'll haul back to work on later anyway?

If farmers produced food like bureaucrats run the government, we'd all be bloated with malnutrition.

Reform is needed all right. And not just in the benefits. How about starting at the top in the home offices?

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Early this morning I heard a bumping and thumping and hurried toward the sound as I thought my husband was trying to use a door that I had not unlocked as yet. (We have four outside doors to lock and unlock everyday).

Anyway, what I discovered was a young pigeon flattened against a windowpane trying desperately to get into the house. It might have been the one that dropped down the silo chute when we put grass silage in recently. When I went outside to get the bird, only by luck was I able to save it from the claws of our many cats.

We shall try to feed it for a few days to give it strength to fly away.

All of this got me to thinking of the many animals that come into our lives and then leave, only to be replaced by others. When I was a small child my father got a shepherd dog for me which was named Rover. He was a friendly dog but he only lived until I was nine years old. One day a stray dog came to our house and my father tried to lose it by having it follow the car with we children in it but when we returned home it was on the back porch. So we named it Trixie and kept it.

My sister had a cat which she called "Him-Honey", that she nuzzled so affectionately that we found it quite disgusting. Other sisters had lambs, goats, turtles, rabbits, hamsters and even a snake.

On our farm we've had a succession of dogs—Jack who was mischevious, two Susies and Herbie who lived with us for over 17 years and now Buster.

There have been special cats like the orange one called Peanut Butter. Also Smokey, the cat who could raise five or six kittens each time, while Cindy's "Muffin" can't raise even one. Rainbow was another good cat who was found mysteriously dead in the snow one morning.

I'll always remember the day we took a wild baby rabbit to the woods to free it from the box in the corner of the kitchen where we'd been keeping it after the mower destroyed its nest. That day my now-grown son shed so many tears as it hopped gleefully away.

So animals come and animals go but I hope we don't make a pet of this bird as my mother did when she had a mourning dove flying free in her kitchen for years.

Keep carpenter bees out of crop storage

NEWARK, Del. — Has outside of your farm buildings started sounding like an ad for crunchy granola? It could be carpenter bees at work enlarging the tunnels for their young.

Shed ceilings, roof overhangs, redwood fences, and other wooden structures are common nesting sites for this pest.

While damage to the wood from a single bee is slight, over a period of years the activities of numerous bees is certain to cause considerable structural damage, warns University of Delaware extension entomologist Frank Boys. The situation isn't serious until many holes about a half inch in diameter start to appear in the exposed wood trim.

Carpenter bees are often mistaken for bumble bees. But they have many differences.

Bumble bees are large social bees about a half inch long. They're black and yellow, or black with orange body markings, and their nests are usually underground. For some reason, they also have a fondness for abandoned cars, particularly the seat padding. Bumble bees spend most of their time traveling between their nest and the flowers on which they feed.

Carpenter bees are about the same size as bumble bees, but the top side of their body is nearly bare, with no areas of yellow hair, so that they have a shiny, black appearance. They also spend time gathering pollen for their young, but unlike bumble bees, they have no pollen baskets on their legs. Male carpenter bees can't sting. Females rarely do.

These pests don't eat the wood they tunnel in, but use the galleries for rearing their young. The female begins by drilling an entrance hole — usually on the vertical surface of the wood. Once the hole is about an inch deep, she makes a right angle turn and starts working with the grain of the wood.

Since any wooden structure, especially an older surface, is subject to carpenter bee attack, it helps to paint wood surfaces as a deterrent to attack, says Boys Use of non-wooden materials like aluminum can also help avoid problems, when building.

A five-percent application of Sevin dust directed into the nest opening aids in control. Treat openings after dark on a cool evening when bees are less active. A plastic squeeze bottle is one way to apply the dust.

After treatment, do not plug the holes, stresses Boys. Let the bees pass freely through the gallery enterance. They'll pick up the dust on their bodies and distribute it inside the tunnels where their young are. Holes can later be filled with plastic wood or caulked and painted, once you're sure the bees are gone.

If you can't reach the hole to apply dust, use a wasp or hornet aerosol that projects the spray several feet.

O'Day's U-Pick harvest continues entire growing season

SEAFORD, Del. — The aim of "O'Day's U-Pick" farm market operation near Seaford, Del. is to have a vegetable or fruit crop ready to pick at all times during the entire growing season.

That way, customers keep coming back to pick their own farm fresh produce.

The season began about Memorial Day with strawberries, which were available until about June 10. Then, cabbage became available, followed by squash and string beans this week. Broccoli will be added to the harvest list about the end of the month.

Also available to pick-your-own marketers this year will be lima beans, snap beans, sweet peppers, tomatoes, slicing cukes, sweet corn and egg plant. Turnips and several other cool-season crops are expected to be ready in the fall on the 650-acre farm five miles west of Seaford.

Bill O'Day and his wife Donna started their modest pick-your-own operation in 1978 in the field surrounding their home on the Woodland-Reliance Road. Customer response has been so heartening that they've added more land and more crops to the project each year since, and it looks as though they might keep on expanding.

This spring, for instance, they set out six and a half acres of new strawberry plants — enough to more than double their previous

Harvest on "O'Days U-Pick" operation near Seaford, Del. begins with strawberries about Memorial Day. Pick-your-own marketers can visit the farm throughout the growing season and find some sort of vegetable or fruit crop ready for picking.

U-Pick harvest

acreage in this highly popular U-pick crop. The new "patch" will begin producing next spring. They've also added a peach orchard and blueberry bushes. These will both bear lightly this summer.

Memorial Day was a busy day for strawberry sales. Altogether this Memorial Day they sold about 1100 quarts, says Donna. Customers paid 45 cents a quart for the berries, which have been selling for between $1 and $1.95 in the stores.

University of Delaware extension vegetable specialist Mike Orzolek, who helps farmers like Bill O'Day solve production problems, estimates that you can get about 5,000 quarts an acre from a planting of strawberries over the three-week period plants are bearing. By growing several varieties that mature at different times, O'Day can extend the harvest another week or so—provided a spell of hot weather doesn't speed ripening of fruit on all plants.

Strawberry plants are good for about three seasons before disease and weed problems render them unproductive. Then you must relocate the bed and replant using healthy new stock. O'Day figures he's spent about $2,000 so far, not counting labor, just to set out his new six and a half acre patch. So the crop's not all profit by any means. It took a lot of time to remove blooms, too, so that the young plants wouldn't set fruit their first season.

Because supply and variety of crops available can change overnight, Donna O'Day strongly urges all prospective pickers to call before making the trip out to the farm. The drive from Seaford or Laurel isn't much, but some of their clients come from as far away as Ocean View or Salisbury. A few weeks ago a man drove over from Baltimore with his 80-year-old mother. Between them they picked 25 quarts of strawberries.

Donna, who handles the customer contacts and sales, says quite a few other senior citizens come to pick, too. But there's no "typical" age group or customer. Last spring, somebody rode out from town on a bicycle and picked berries into a brown paper bag. People have even picked into flower pots and a diaper bag. The other day they got their first Moped customer.

The new peach orchard should start producing lightly this year, but Bill and Donna haven't decided yet whether this will be a U-pick or pre-picked crop. At any rate, once the trees start to bear, there'll be four varieties to choose from — a white, Belle Georgia, and three yellow types, Loring, Redskin and Red Haven.

Altogether this summer, they have 25 acres in fruits and vegetables, plus an additional 40 in sweet corn. This crop is sold either U-pick or pulled, depending on demand. In the past, some operators of roadside stands have come to pick large quantities of corn for resale to their own customers.

Though they're out in the country, they feel they're in an ideal location for business, close as they are to towns like Seaford, Laurel and Federalsburg. They're open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday On Saturdays they open at 1 and close at 5, so the family has a chance to go to church in the morning and relax a bit in the evening.

O'Day has two full-time employees who help him with his corn and soybeans. He also hires a couple of workers to hoe weeds in the U-pick crops during the growing season. But otherwise they do much of the work themselves. Their two children, Billy (9) and Becky (7), help out where they can—showing customers where to pick, and doing some of the weeding. Bill's mother, Mrs. Mildred O'Day, also lends a welcome hand. So it's very much a family business.

The O'Days keep things fairly simple for themselves and their clients. You're expected to provide your own containers—which accounts for some of the unconventional items used on occasion to gather strawberries. They show you how to pick, and how to tell when a fruit or vegetable is mature. Otherwise, they pretty much leave people to themselves Contrary to some pick-your-own operators, they don't tell you which section of the field you can pick in. Their sign does say no pets or children under 12 are permitted in the fields. But if someone brings young children, they can wait near the sales stand while their parents pick. On the whole, the system seems to work very well.

The only problem, admits Donna, is that they're tied rather closely to the farm during the growing season. But this doesn't seem to bother her much. There's even a certain notoriety attached to the business. When she goes shopping in Seaford these days, people are likely to stop her in the supermarket to exclaim, "Oh, you're the U-pick lady!"

Bill O'Day used to grow a lot of vegetables on contract from some of the processors on the peninsula. But then he decided he'd rather grow his own for fresh market sale. U-pick seemed a logical alternative, from a labor standpoint. And so far he hasn't been disappointed.

USDA seeks farm women suggestions

LITITZ - USDA will soon know a good deal more about the role of women on the nation's farms and their experiences with farm services and programs.

About 4,100 farm women will be contacted in a nationwide survey this summer as part of an inquiry into the status of women in relation to USDA programs, program management procedures, and job opportunities.

The survey will be conducted for USDA by the National Research Center of Chicago, a nonprofit social research institute.

Information from the survey will provide USDA's recently established Farm Women's Project with a record of farm women's experiences with USDA services and their perceptions of the Department.

The Farm Women's Project will also report on farm women's legal rights to USDA program benefits and funds.

Farm women with suggestions on the survey can write to Carol Forbes, Farm Women's Project, Room 1548 South Bldg., USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250, or phone 202/447-2582.

Franklin County honors its new dairy princess

BY RUTH ANN BENEDICT
Staff Correspondent

WAYNESBORO — Miss Carol Hawbaker, 18 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hawbaker of Lemasters, was recently crowned as 1980 Franklin County Dairy Princess at the Thirteenth Annual Franklin County Dairy Princess Contest held Saturday, June 14, at the Savoy Restaurant in Waynesboro.

Miss Hawbaker is a 1980 graduate from the James Buchanan High School and is currently looking for a job in the secretarial field.

In the meantime Carol helps out on the 175 acre, 40 cow Holstein herd family farm which has been in the family for years. She has one brother and two sisters.

Miss Gina Hissong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jere Hissong of Mercersburg, was named first runner-up to Miss Hawbaker.

Miss Hissong is also a 1980 graduate from the James Buchanan High School.

Other contestants were: Victoria Zimmerman, 16 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Zimmerman, Mercersburg; Gwen Kennedy, 18 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs Norman Kennedy, Greencastle; and Carolyn Koons, 20 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Koons, Waynesboro.

In her dairy promotional presentation, Miss Hawbaker chose to tell a bedtime story, incorporating into the story the importance of milk in our daily lives.

In Carol's bedtime tale she created a town called Calciumville through which a river of milk flowed and where all were happy and healthy.

All the people in Calciumville loved milk and knew that it was very good for them.

Over the mountain from Calciumville was Fat Town. Everyone in Fat Town loved candy, cake and soda pop. Most of the people there didn't feel very well.

Carol went on to tell about how all the little calories in Fat Town decided that something must be done about the healthy people in Calciumville They decided that the river of milk must be captured.

One hot July day hundreds of fatties charged down the mountain towards Calciumville. In desparation the people of Calciumville made cakes, cookies and pies to feed the fatties as they came rolling into the valley. When the food was discovered the fatties forgot all about capturing the river of milk, gorged themselves on food, and later rolled slowly back up the mountain to Fat Town.

The town of Calciumville was saved and is still surviving today because "Milk is the One" ended Miss Hawbaker.

Carolyn Meyers, 1979 Franklin County Dairy Princess, spoke of her activities and highlights during her past years reign. Miss Meyers also crowned Miss Hawbaker and presented gifts to all the contestants and to her booking chairman Mrs. Florence Robinson of Waynesboro.

Judges for the event were: Mrs. David Roth, Perry County; Mrs. William Hess, Lancaster County; and Mr Ivo V. Otto, Jr., Cumberland County.

These judges scored the contestants on appearance, speaking ability, poise and personality, intelligence and industry knowledge during the three evening events of private interviews, modeling on stage and their three to five minute milk promotional presentations.

Earl Strine of Chambersburg served as the master of ceremonies.

The Franklin County Dairy Promotion Committee awarded the new Princess Miss Hawbaker $100. Miss Hissong received $50 as first runner-up and all other contestants received $25.

Miss Hawbaker will represent Franklin County in the State Dairy Princess Pageant in September which is sponsored by the Keystone Milk Marketing Council, Inc.

The 1980 Franklin County Dairy Princess Contest was sponsored by the Dairy Industry of Franklin County.

Carol Hawbaker, seated, was crowned 1980 Franklin County Dairy Princess recently by the 1979 Princess Carolyn Meyers, left. To the right of Carol is Nina Hissong who was named first runner-up to Carol.

1979 Franklin County Dairy Princess Carolyn Meyers made her last official appearance at the 1980 Franklin County Dairy Princess Contest recently.

Berwick Veg Co-op elects 5 new directors

BERWICK — Berwick Vegetable Cooperative hosted members, guests, and friends on the occasion of its 27th Annual Dinner Meeting, Saturday, June 14, 1980, at the Columbia-Montour Vo-Tech School, R. 5, Bloomsburg.

This annual gathering was addressed by Mrs. Ruth Hand, home economist, Schuylkill County extension service.

Edward Hopkins, Falls, President of the Board of Directors, presided over the annual membership meeting, assisted by Raymond Hetherington, Ringtown, Secretary of the Board.

The Annual Report of Operations was presented by Burt Hetherington, Ringtown, Manager of the Cooperative

Hetherington reported a profit for the fiscal period under review He stated that the Board of Directors has already taken action to distribute the profit in full in cash to BVC's patrons within the time frame prescribed by Pennsylvania Cooperative Law

Hetherington discussed the diversity of services in both produce marketing and farm supply purchasing offered to BVC's patrons in 22 counties of northeastern Pennsylvania and 3 counties of western Pennsylvania. This diversified program gives BVC the opportunity to be active and available to its patrons a full twelve months of the year.

He stated that all of this contributes to the sound financial position of the cooperative and the quality of the service offered

Myrtle Neidlinger, Zion Grove, Chairman of the Nominating Committee presented a slate of nominees for election to the Board of Directors by the membership present at the Annual Meeting.

Board Members elected for three-year terms are: District I, W Scott White, Clarks Summit; District II, Harold Smith, Nescopeck; District III, Harvey Vough, Dushore; District IV, Harold Rarig, Catawissa; and District V, Raymond Hetherington, Ringtown.

President Hopkins complimented Ed Naunczek, Berwick, Chairman of the Program Committee and others who assisted in the staging of a successful annual meeting.

Hopkins called attention to the passing of one of BVC's founders, Clemon Smith, R 1 Nescopeck. He was a member of the Organization Committee, served on the original Board of Directors, and was BVC's first Board President. At the time of his passing, Clem was serving BVC as a Member of the Board and Board Secretary

President Hopkins expressed his gratitude to all for the cooperation extended to him by fellow Board Members, Patrons, and Staff of BVC during a very successful year of operation.

Hetherington introduced Mrs. Hand, the speaker of the evening. Mrs. Hand's address, "The Upbeat Attitude" dealt with our ability to survive the fast pace of the decades ahead. Finding our own stress levels and maintaining a positive attitude will help us to expand our capacity as long as we live.

Attitude and emotions can affect our health and our ability to cope with everyday occurances. By mastering these attributes we can fill the many voids which can occur in future life, she said.

Hetherington presented Mrs. Hand with the traditional vegetable basket in appreciation for her address and many other courtesies extended to BVC and its patrons.

Exotic Newcastle alert, quarantines lifted

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell has announced that special precautions for state poultrymen and pet bird owners, ordered in April, have been rescinded, and that a federal-state task force has been disbanded.

Hallowell also noted that quarantines on 14 pet shops for exotic Newcastle disease have also been lifted. The pet shops were originally quarantined because they had received birds which had been exposed to infected birds from an Alexandria, Virginia, bird dealer. Extensive testing followed all quarantines and revealed no additional exotic Newcastle infection.

No commercial poultry was involved in the outbreak of the disease, which was discovered April 6 in a pet bird from a Camp Hill pet shop.

Hallowell said, "The cooperation of the commercial and pet bird industries, as well as small flock owners, was a major contributing factor in our successful control of the outbreak."

Although the disease poses no health threat to consumers of eggs and poultry meat, exotic Newcastle is a highly contagious and usually lethal disease of birds. In commercial poultry, death losses can approach 100 percent.

Hallowell said the Commonwealth was "quite lucky in avoiding a serious problem with this outbreak."

For several years, exotic Newcastle has threatened the state's $300 million poultry industry. Hallowell noted that while the state has been fortunate to avoid exotic disease problems, caution and care should still be the watchword for all poultry and small flock owners.

The Department has taken further steps to help avoid possible exposure to exotic Newcastle and other bird diseases of foreign origin.

"As of June 15, 1980," he said, "all birds shipped into Pennsylvania by dealers in California and Virginia must be accompanied by an official Pennsylvania permit. The permit must include a statement signed by a licensed accredited veterinarian that all birds in the shipment are in apparent good health, and originate either from official USDA quarantine stations or from breeder parents within the United States."

California and Virginia are two states where major outbreaks of exotic Newcastle was confirmed.

Shoo flies - break the chain

FLEMINGTON, N.J. - It seems no matter how careful you are, you'll have flies this summer. Flies breed in decaying organic matter, so the first line of defense is sanitation.

The maggots you note in garbage in warm weather are an intermediate step in the life cycle of the house fly, our principal nuisance fly. You can do much to inhibit flies by breaking the chain. It starts with sanitation, tightly fitting garbage container will help.

And, if you have livestock, use good manure management. No manure piles, but spread thinly and frequently. If it dries out on the field, little or no problem.

If you do have an existing manure pile, cover it carefuly with plastic and "seal" around the edges with soil. You can uncover it in late fall. We have some excellent publications, lists of recommendations for control of house and biting flies on livestock, dairy, and poultry farms.

Suffolk ram brings record price

WHITNEYVILLE — A record price for a Pennsylvania performance tested ram was paid June 7 at the Fourth Performance Tested Ram Sale, held at the Whitneyville Fairgrounds in Tioga County.

The top selling Suffolk ram, boasting a height of 35 inches, a loin eye area of 4.59 square inches and final weight of 354 pounds, brought $1450 for owner Paul H. Leader of York. The ram, Leader G1054, sold to Linda Adler of Bloomsburg, Columbia County.

A total of 37 yearling rams crossed the auction block, averaging $362.57 for a grand total of $13,415.

Five Dorset rams averaged $372; 16 Suffolk rams averaged $538; three Corriedale rams averaged $126; six Hampshire rams averaged $253; six Shropshire rams averaged $154; and one Southdown ram brought $110.

The top selling Dorset ram, Carolair D-80, was owned by Carolair Farm of Knoxville, Tioga County The ram, which claimed the largest loin eye among the Dorset rams on test, sold for $520. C & J Farms of Columbia Crossroads, Bradford County, was the buyer.

Charles McCrae of Mohnton, Berks County, sold the top Corriedale ram, C.R.M. 94. The ram which weighed 248 pounds and had a 4.75 square inch loin eye, went to Donald VanVliet of Wellsboro, Tioga County, for $170.

The high Hampshire ram, recording a 1.04 pound average daily gain, was owned by Shober Farm of Berlin, Somerset County. The ram sold to C & J Farms for $300.

Kelly McConnell of Frederickstown, Washington County, was the successful bidder on the top selling Shropshire yearling ram. The ram, which had a final weight of 244 pounds and a loin eye area of 3.89 square inches, was owned by Warn G. Manhennett of Cochranville, Chester County. The ram sold for $230.

C & J Farms, the top buyer of the sale with 10 rams, was again the successful bidder on the Southdown yearling ram. The ram, which sold for $110, had a 4.25 square loin eye and was owned by W. L Henning of State College, Centre County.

"This was quite a successful sale," said a PDA spokesman. "There were several exceptionally tall rams which also carried length and good confirmation throughout. These are excellent indications that Pennsylvania sheep producers are striving for a complete package, rather than show ring fads."

There will be a Performance Tested Ram Lamb Sale, September 6 at the Department's Meat Animal Evaluation Center in State College, Centre County. Along with the ram lamb sale will be an invitational ewe sale.

Nominations are now being accepted for next year's Fifth Performance Tested Yearling Ram Sale. Entries close August 31, 1980

For further information write to Robert Kimble, Director of the Meat Animal Evaluation Center, 651 Fox Hollow Road, State College, PA 16801.

This year's sale was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the Pennsylvania State University, the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association, and the Tioga County Sheep and Wool Growers Association.

Berks Ag Expo opens with V.I.P.'s

BY LAUREL SCHAEFFER
Staff Correspondent

WYOMISSING — This week, the second annual Berks County Agricultural Expo was kicked-off with a formal ribbon cutting ceremony and dinner at Wanamaker's Restaurant here at the Berkshire Mall.

Reading City Mayor Karen Miller, Pennsylvania Farmers' Association Administrative Secretary, Richard Newpher, and Master of the Pennsylvania Grange, Charles Wismer, were on hand for the special ceremonies.

Expressing the honor she felt in being asked to speak during the occasion, Miller mentioned her distant farm background and the similar concerns shared by the urban and rural residents of Berks County, like land use

"We can work together for the good of both the city and farm land," the Mayor told her farm neighbors. "We want the development of housing and industry in our city while you want to preserve your beautiful countryside."

After seeing how fertile land was lost to development in a part of Illinois where she was raised, Miller emphasized her concern that this same thing wouldn't happen to Berks County.

"The high quality, fresh farm products available here is a major selling point for our city," she related. "The beautiful countryside surrounding Reading helps to draw people and industry into the city."

Miller mentioned her friends in other cities look forward to the "care packages" sent to them containing Berks meats and produce.

Calling Berks County one of the top counties in the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, Richard Newpher commented on the first class style in which the Expo was being held.

He explained that the state office of the association does not make it a policy to get involved in local events, but it supports the public relations efforts such events promote between the city and farm people.

"Consumers need to know how and where their food comes from, and that farmers need to be able to make a profit to survive," he said.

Charles Wismer reminded the Expo listeners that agriculture is the nation's number one employer and exporter, playing a very important role in the economy. He stressed the right of the individual — one of the major goals of the Pa. Grange.

"If milk and egg prices rose with other costs such as transportation over the last twenty years they would cost the consumer almost $4.50 per gallon of milk and $3.40 a dozen eggs," he concluded.

Virginville Grange marks dairy month

VIRGINVILLE — At the Virginville Grange's recent dairy supper the Berks County Dairy Princess Debbie Sunday was the featured speaker.

The open house meeting featured a dairy supper in addition to the dairy month activities

Kathy Garman, a nutrition consultant for the Dairy Council, presented a film entitled "A Nation on the Run"

In addition, the group presented two individual awards for bowling. Cited were Dennis Wagner and Jeffrey Dreibelbis

Members are planning several meetings and events in the coming month, inculding State youth camp July 11 through 13; a youth sandwich sale on July 23; and work on the float and fair project beginning on July 7.

SCSA focuses on economics, ethics, and ecology

ANKENY, Ia. — Blending economics, ethics, and ecology into effective conservation programs will be the focus of the 35th annual meeting of the Soil Conservation Society of America, August 3-6, 1980, at the Hyatt Regency Dearborn in Dearborn, Michigan.

Theme of the meeting will be "Economics, Ethics, Ecology Roots of Productive Conservation."

Three renowned conservationists will keynote the meeting ecologist Eugene Odum, director of the University of Georgia's Institute of Ecology; L. L. Boger, president of Oklahoma State University; and James P. Bruce, assistant deputy minister of Environment Canada's Environmental Management Service.

Other highlights include symposia and roundtable discussions on the land use planning urgency, the water management crunch, and the energy squeeze on land and water management as well as a session featuring reviews of five major natural resource management assessments now being conducted on the national and international levels.

These will be followed by the Third Annual H. Wayne Pritchard Lecture delivered by futurist Robert Theobald.

A preliminary program and details on registration are available from SCSA, 7515 N.E. Ankeny Road, Ankeny, IA 50021.

SCSA is a nonprofit scientific and educational organization dedicated to advancing the science and art of good land use. It has 15,000 members in the United States, Canada, and about 80 other countries.

Ann Murren chosen Adams dairy princess

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

BIGLERVILLE — Ann R Murren, 19, was selected as the 1980 Adams County Dairy Princess at ceremonies held Saturday evening at the Biglerville High School.

The daughter of Mr and Mrs. Thomas Murren, Hanover R4, Ann served last year as Alternate Adams County Dairy Princess. Ann was crowned by Christine Gitt, the retiring Dairy Princess.

Sherri L. Kaltreider, daughter of Mr and Mrs Robert Kaltreider, York Springs R2, was named alternate.

After the announcement, Ann said she was "a little shocked, but very happy." She said she feels her work as Alternate last year played a part in her winning the title Adams County's Alternate attends the Dairy Princess Seminar along with the winner, and Ann says, "That's a good idea." She filled in for Chrissy Gitt at banquets and other events as necessary.

A 1979 graduate of New Oxford Senior High School, Ann is working on her parents' Guernsey farm until Fall when she will attend Southeastern Academy in Orlando, Florida to train for a travel career

Poised throughout the contest, Ann was undaunted when asked to tell what role she felt women should play on a modern dairy farm Ann replied, "I think a woman can help in any way she can. If she can do a job she has every right to do it. On the farm, I am for women's liberation."

Having grown up on a Guernsey farm and participated in 4-H activities for 11 years, Ann said she feels there are many advantages to farm life. "You learn responsibility. You learn what you are supposed to do and when you are supposed to do it."

It was not Ann's first win in a contest. She was selected as the Brushtown Fire queen for 1979-1980 and was second runner-up in the Miss Hanover competition Active in FFA, she was selected in 1979 as Adams and York Counties' FFA Princess.

Ann served as secretary of the Conewago FFA Chapter secretary for three years, was Adams County FFA Reporter for 1979 and placed first in the state's FFA public speaking contest. Her experiences in speaking at FFA events will surely benefit her as she begins her year of milk promotion.

She has already begun plans to travel to elementary schools and present dairy promotion information there, but she says she would also like to get a small promotion going in the county.

"No one else does it, and I'd like to try to do one," she stated.

Alternate Dairy Princess Sherri Kattreides is a senior at Biglerville High School and is a member of the Jefferson 4-H Club in York County and the Heidlersburg Community 4-H Club in Adams County During her interview she was asked how she would respond to a youngster who said he thought milk tasts "yukky."

Sherri replied, "I would tell him to try different ways of drinking milk and using dairy products."

Other contestants included Debra A. Lauchman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard H. Lauchman, New Oxford R1; Gail Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Glenn Smith, Aspers R1; Karen E. Sprague, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Sprague, Gettysburg R3; and Joyce Zepp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Zepp, New Oxford R2. The girls' fathers escorted them to the stage during the contest.

Retiring Dairy Princess Christine Gitt presented the skit she gave to elementary students to promote dairy products and expressed her appreciation at having the opportunity to represent Adams County Dairy Farmers.

She said, "I'll miss it. It was a challenge I was proud and honored to be Dairy Princess. It is important for us all to promote milk and to get the message across to consumers."

Judges for the contest included Connie Harness, chief of the agriculture promotions office for the Department of Agriculture; Thomas Dumm, Perry County dairyman; and Richard M. Smith, manager of the Chambersburg office of the Production Credit Association of York, and a farmer in partnership with his son.

Master of Ceremonies was N. Alan Bair, director of member services for Atlantic Breeders Cooperative.

Entertainment was provided by the Note Blenders Barbershop Quartet

Adams County's new Dairy Princess Ann Murren, c, is crowned by retiring Dairy Princess Christine Gitt. The contest was held at Biglerville High School with six contestants participating.

Carlisle youth takes first in Limousin judging

PARKERSBURG, W.V. — Last Saturday was bright and sunny for Bobby Line, Carlisle and the other 200 people who attended the Eastern Limousin Breeders Association field day here at Harry Kesterson and Sons Farm on June 14.

It was a grand day for Bobby who walked away from the Junior judging contest as the top judge. In the same division, Lisa Westfall of Spencer, West Virginia, came in second.

The field day participants judged four classes of Limousin cattle. It was a great opportunity for many to see the type of cattle the breeders are attempting to produce while giving them a chance to practice their judging skills.

In the Senior division, Dale Schott of Bolivar, Ohio came in first place, with second place going to Chris Day, Coolville, Ohio.

In the Junior steer show, two brothers took home the top honors. Charlie Conrad, Rockport, W.V., and his brother Joe captured the grand and reserve grand championship placings respectively.

Present at the field day were Larry Sterling, Reedsville, W.V., president of the Eastern Limousin Breeders Assoc.; Greg Martin, Denver, Colorado, executive vice-president of the North American Limousin Foundation; and, John Peters, W.V. Extension specialist.

Future events planned by the association include: first National Eastern Limousin Show, Highland Fairgrounds, Hillsboro, Ohio on September 6; and a Junior heifer show, Eastern National, Timonium, Maryland.

NEWARK, Del. — Predicted U.S. soybean plantings for 1980 are virtually unchanged from last year. This, together with record world oilseed supplies and expanding soybean output in South America, means the price outlook for old crop beans this spring and summer isn't too bright, reports University of Delaware crops marketing specialist Carl German.

Local farmers still holding on to some of last year's beans have several marketing options.

First, you can continue to store them, if you think soybean prices will go high enough to more than cover the higher cost of storage. The direction prices take will depend heavily on weather conditions through the end of July.

You also have the option of selling now for cash, if you think prices aren't likely to go any higher. On May 28 cash beans were going for $5.95 a bushel. On June 6 they were selling for $5.77.

You should also consider forward selling your soybeans, since future prices are better than cash prices right now for both old and new crop beans.

National planting intentions for the 1980 crop are one of the factors influencing this outlook, explains German. It looks like 71.3 million acres will go into soybeans–down less than one percent from 1979. Given the uncertainties about actual plantings and yield this early in the season, a crop of between 1.9 and 2.2 billion bushels is projected. The 1979 output was a record 2.3 billion bushels.

Prospects are for 82 million acres of corn to be planted—up two million from last year. National corn production has set records every year since 1975. While it's too early to speculate on this year's crop, early-season conditions seem mostly favorable.

As of the first week of June, the soybean/corn price ratio was running 2.2/1 in favor of corn.

Expanded soybean output in Brazil and other South American countries, suspension of soybean and product sales to Russia, and increased costs to farmers, processors and others carrying large oilseed stocks are other factors putting pressure on current bean prices.

On April 1, U.S. soybean stocks totaled 1.2 billion bushels compared with only .9 billion a year ago. About half were stored on farms. Soybean producers also control some of the beans off farms. With high storage costs, processors and exporters are holding inventories to working minimums.

On the international scene, further expansion of U.S. exports this season could be stymied, predicts the marketing specialist. The reason: South American soybean production appears headed for a record. It could exceed 20 million metric tons—about five million tons or one-third above 1979.

The federal government continues its efforts to offset price effects on farmers of the Russian export suspension last year. These efforts include isolating grain from markets through the reserve program and through direct purchase of corn by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

But many farmers had to sell grain this spring to get cash to plant their 1980 crops, so farm marketings have been large. To some extent, complain government analysts, these sales have offset federal efforts to isolate grain from markets and have contributed to current weakness in prices.

Locally, Maryland and Delaware farmers produced a combined total of 75.9 million bushels of corn in 1979, compared to 74 million the year before.

Maryland farmers reported plans to plant a record 760,000 acres of corn in 1980—an increase of 10 percent over last year.

Delaware farmers expected to plant 178,000 acres of corn—2000 bushels or slightly more than one percent less than a year ago.

Combined Maryland-Delaware production of soybeans for 1979 was 19.5 million bushels as compared to 17.8 million in 1978. Maryland farmers intend to plant 390,000 acres of soybeans, unchanged from last year. Delaware growers said they intend to plant 286,000 acres of beans—six percent more than last year's record high.

Corn stocks in all positions in Maryland on April 1 stood at 27.2 millions bushels—18 percent more than a year ago. Corn stocks in all positions in Delaware stood at 6.9 million bushels—up 35 percent from April 1979.

Soybean stocks stored on Maryland farms at 1.4 million bushels April 1 were down 10 percent from a year ago. In Delaware, farm-stored soybeans totaled one million bushels—the largest carry-over ever recorded on this date.

Delaware grain prices have been declining recently, says German. He expects any price improvement this summer to be heavily dependent on 1980 production developments, including the weather.

More For Less

May milk production in Order 2 jumped a million pounds a day over April to a total of 993 million pounds — the highest in eight years. But even that monthly increase of 3.2 percent was the smallest since February.

For the first time since last fall, increases in Order 2 receipts were under the national average May production in the country was up 3.4 percent over last May and Pennsylvania jumped a whopping four percent

Traditionally May has been the biggest production month in Order 2 so hopefully you may be looking at the peak for the year.

Of course, the more for less rule applies to the blend price as most producers know but ignore. So, as a result of more milk, you'll be getting six cents a hundred less than last month.

You can argue that your Louisville Plan payment was up 10 cents over April so you really gained four cents. If you take that route then you'll have to admit you blew a 24 cent increase in your Class I price over last month by lowering your utilization to 39.6 percent.

Altogether, you could have done much worse with 993 million pounds at $11.90 a hundred. What helped you in addition to that 24 cent jump in the Class I price (for which you can thank the March M-W and the price support program) was a 15 million pound increase in Class I sales that boosted consumption by 100,000 pounds a day

But look out for June.

Even if total production drops you will have another 40 cent take out for the Louisville Pan, your Class I price goes up only nine cents and, most importantly, school's out and Class I sales will drop 20 million pounds.

Less For More

If you're interested in changing more milk for less money to less milk for more money, it's not hard to do — at least on paper

If you could reduce production by only three percent, even below your present high rate, you could have your manufacturing grade milk price at least up to the support level of $12.07 instead of the $11.59 that it was in May.

The M-W price is always higher than the manufacturing grade price So it could easily be $12.15.

The May seasonal adjustment for Class II milk in Order 2 is minus 12 cents so that would make it $12.03 The Class I differential is $2.25. So, added to the $12.15, it would make that price $14.40.

With a three percent cut in production, your utilization would increase to at least 50 percent. So you could have a blend of $13.21 instead of $11.90 a hundred.

An increase of $1.31 sounds too good — and it is. Let's take out the 15 cent transportation credit from the pool and 40 cents for the Louisville Plan

That makes it $12.56 a hundred. But still 66 cents better than your $11.90 of last month.

But, if you have to reduce production to get it, are you any better off than now?

In May, the average Order 2 producer shipped 1,827 pounds of milk a day (which, incidentally, was and got $217.41 for it

If he dropped three percent, he would ship 1,772 pounds a day. At $12.56 a hundred, he would receive $222.56 or $5.15 more per day.

How much milk is three percent per day? This is what shocks most farmers who think they have to sell half their herd to make an impact on the market.

Actually, it's only 55 pounds per day or a couple of tail end cows that should have been dried off or sold anyway.

Some would even argue that it would pay to dump it, or drink it, or feed it to calves.

If you didn't produce it, you would have additional savings from costs of feed, labor, vet bills and everything else that went into producing that 55 pounds a day.

Admittedly, I've painted this picture with a pretty wide brush and taken some liberties with the two month lag in the M-W and the Class I price

Some will find fault with it but mainly because my "guesstimates" are too low.

I still believe that the "less for more" principal is valid and now's the time to talk about it Right now there are no mechanisms in federal orders or the price support program for supply control except through cooperative. Voluntary programs for this won t work any better than they do for advertising and promotion contributions.

This brings up the other possibility of increasing demand through promotion rather than limiting supply with production controls. It's a good idea but may not return as much as quickly as supply control.

Down the Road or Up the Creek

You're in trouble right now and the supply is going to get controlled by the price sooner or later no matter what you do.

I believe the USDA will be taking some action through the Congress before October — in spite of national elections — that will jerk your chain sufficiently to get your attention.

Even the "trigger" mechanisms that were "out of the question" back in March may be "entirely acceptable" in September Last Spring USDA was out on a limb with that idea but since then it has become Farm Bureau policy.

With that much help it's not a question of "whether" but "when"

Any changes made by the Congress now will probably take you only to September, 1981

Next year a brand new farm bill will be written, and you may get production controls as part of the price support program whether you want them or not.

So, you better be thinking now about what kind of controls you want so you will at least get something you feel you can live with. It's a lot better to be looking down the road now than being up the creek later

Ewe sale conducted in Md.

The first Tri-State Replacement Ewe Sale was held Saturday, June 7, in Knoxville, Md.

The breeding on the 132 ewes available for sale was quite varied, including Corriedale, Cheviot, Dorset, Suffolk, Hampshire, Rambouillet and Finn crosses. The majority of the ewes were crossbred and all had records available on the date of birth, type of birth, sire type, dam type, lambing records in the case of mature ewes, and 90-day weights in the case of ewe lambs.

The top selling ewe for the day was consigned by Clark Jamison of Glenville, W.Va. The four-year old triplet-born Hampshire X Suffolk sold for $115 to Sheila Fleck of Keymar, Md.

The top selling yearling ewes were two Hampshire X Suffolk twin-born ewes consigned by Manley Zinn of Cox's Mill, W. Va. They sold for $105 apiece to Eric Ackerman of Emmitsburg, Md.

The top selling ewe lamb was a March-born Finn X Hampshire consigned by Merry Peep O'Day Farm of Knoxville, Md. She sold for $97.50 to Danny Virts III of Waterford, Va.

Only three yearling rams were offered for sale with the top price of $160 being paid by Peter Snellman of Hollywood, Md. for a registered Suffolk twin consigned by Jonathan May of Timberville, Va.

There was a good turnout for the sale, which was held at Merry Peep O'Day Farm, with buyers from Va., Md., W.Va., and Pa. Mike Jones of Greenville, Va. was the auctioneer and Bambi and Jim Prigel of Merry Peep O'Day Farm managed the sale.

This was the first sale of its type for commercial sheep producers in Maryland in many years. Plans are being made for it to be held as an annual event.

Yearling ewes consigned by Jonathan May, Timberville, Va., were among 132 head offered for sale at the first Tri-State Replacement Ewe Sale held in Knoxville, Md.

Carol Fantom whips out dairy recipes by the dozen

BY PAT KAUFFMAN

DELTA — What do you do if you love to cook but your dairy farmer husband likes the same old things? If you're like Carol Fantom, Delta, you send recipes to Lancaster Farming.

Carol lives with her husband, Robert and their two youngsters, Stephanie, 3 and Richard, 9, on his parents' dairy farm in York County.

Not a farm girl, Carol still finds some of the aspects of farm life puzzling. And she tells that Bobby expects a big farm breakfast of sausage and pancakes every morning.

Lunch times are pretty standard, bacon and scrambled egg sandwiches and tea or hot dogs over a bonfire when the men are working in the fields.

Carol entertains herself with embroidery, crochet, reading and bingo. But now and then she dreams of making some of the more exotic dishes in her collection of cookbooks. And one fine day she took the time to sit down and mail over 50 of them in.

Carol said that when the children are both in school during the day she hopes to become more involved with the family dairy operation of about 60 milkers. But for now, she enjoys cooking and being a mother. Some of her recipes follow.

FLUFFY BERRY CHEESE PIE

Pastry for single-crust 9-inch pie
1 cup miniature marshmallows
½ cup milk
1 3-ounce package strawberry-flavored gelatin
½ cup water
1 3-ounce package cream cheese, softened
1 10-ounce package frozen strawberries, thawed
½ cup whipping cream

Line 9-inch pie plate with pastry; bake and cool. In a saucepan, heat miniature marshmallows and milk over medium-low heat, stirring frequently until marshmallows are melted. Set aside. In a small saucepan, combine strawberry-flavored gelatin and water. Heat and stir until the gelatin is dissolved. Combine marshmallow mixture and gelatin. Gradually beat into the softened cream cheese. Drain thawed strawberries reserving syrup. Add water to syrup to equal ¾ cup liquid. Stir strawberry syrup into gelatin mixture. Chill until the mixture is partially set. Whip the gelatin mixture. Fold in the strawberries. Whip the cream. Fold into the whipped gelatin mixture. Chill again until the mixture mounds when spooned. Pile the strawberry mixture into the baked pastry shell. Chill 3-4 hours or until filling is set. Garnish with dollops of additional whipped cream and strawberries, if desired.

TUNA-NOODLE CASSEROLE

8-ounces noodles
2 7-ounce cans tuna, well drained
1½ cups dairy sour cream
¾ cup milk
1 3-ounce can sliced mushrooms, drained
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup dry bread crumbs
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted

Heat oven to 350° F. Cook noodles as directed on the package. Return drained noodles to kettle and stir in tuna, sour cream, milk, mushrooms, salt and pepper. Pour into ungreased 2-quart casserole. Mix bread crumbs, cheese and butter. Sprinkle over casserole. If desired, sprinkle paprika over bread crumb mixture. Bake uncovered 35-40 minutes or until bubbly.

Carol is shown with Stephanie, her cook's helper looking over some new recipes. Carol collects cookbooks and enjoys looking up new recipes in her spare time.

SURGE

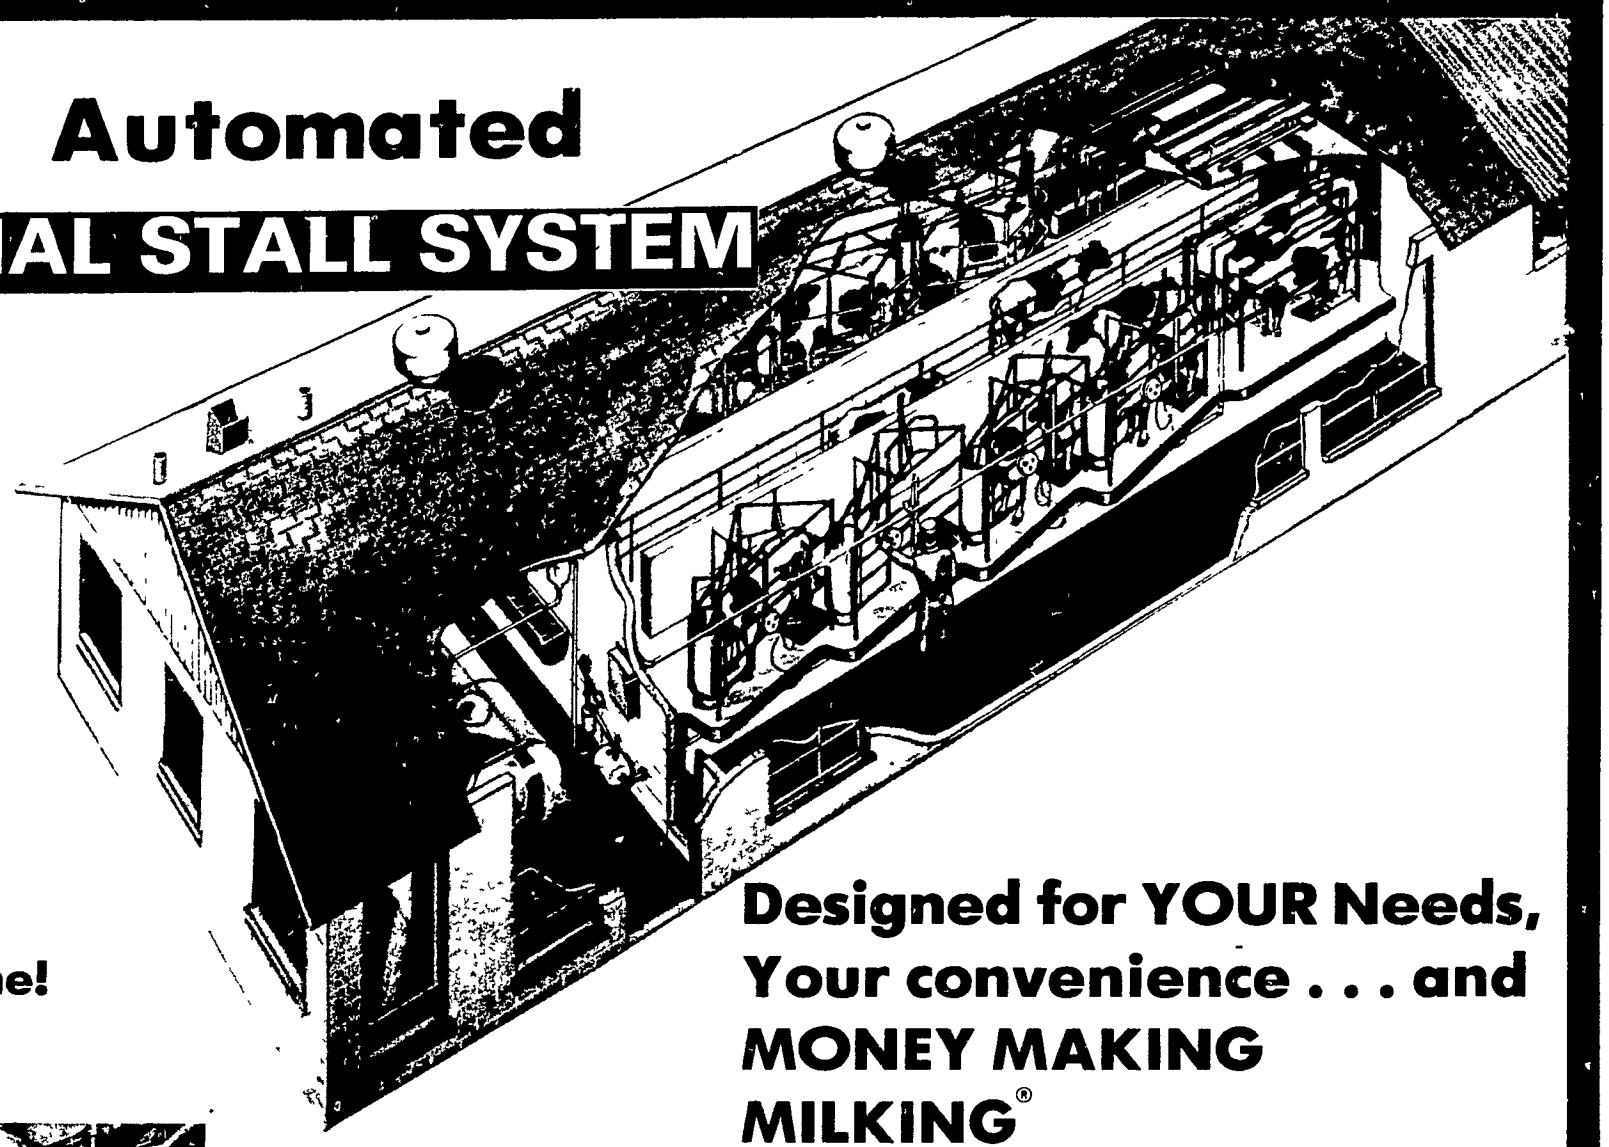
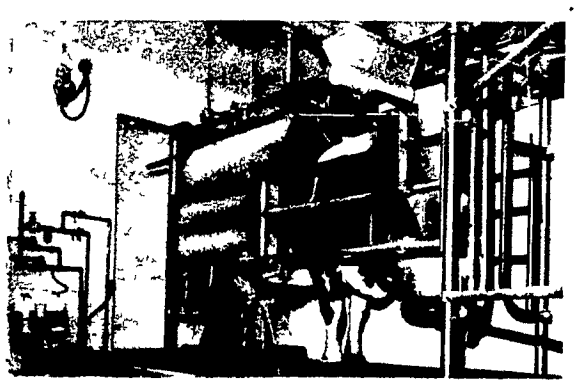
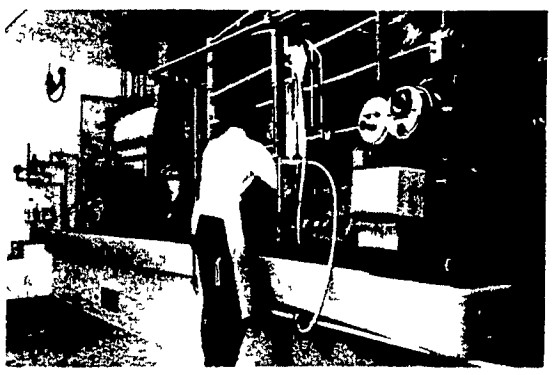
DIAGONAL STALL SYSTEM

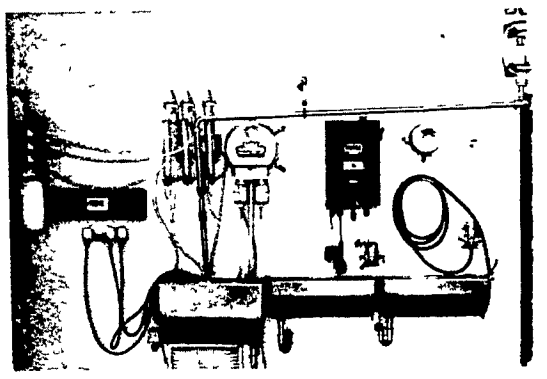


June is dairy month

It's like having an extra man at milking time!







Designed for YOUR Needs, Your convenience . . . and MONEY MAKING MILKING®

If it's LARGER DAIRY PROFITS you're looking for — take time to see your Surge dealer now! Hundreds of dairymen have realized this "larger profit" goal by installing a Surge Automated Diagonal Stall System in their new or remodeled milking parlors.

Of course, larger dairy profits come only when proper dairy management is combined with a successful dairy system. You can add more cows, expand your facility, buy new labor saving equipment — but unless you invest in the RIGHT system of milking, you won't reach the PROFIT levels you're looking for.

You can milk those additional cows and milk them properly in a Surge Automated Diagonal Stall System. Good cow milking is not sacrificed for "cows per hour" efficiency — you get both! We encourage you to keep a good man in the milking parlor — and we make it easier for him to do a proper job.

Having good cow milking — you will get MORE MILK — with the same feed ration and the same production cost. Your labor costs are reduced because you produce more milk per man-hour.

A Surge Automated Diagonal Stall System may very well be the answer to your search for larger dairy profits.

Brief answers to short questions

Sheila's Shorts

By Sheila Miller

'Earrings' for cows?

At last week's Polled Hereford field day, held at JV Farm, near Douglassville, Berks County, I got to see some of the prettiest cattle I've ever laid eyes on.

What struck me about these animals was their overall condition and frame. In Polled Hereford circles, Jesse Terry and his wife have some of the most progressive cattle in their breed.

But besides their pedigree, height and stretch, these cattle had the look of 'love'. Grazing out on their manicured pastures, these animals radiated health.

Their coats shown in the bright sunshine, the cows were fleshy with plenty of milk for their growing calves.

And, these cows were not nervously switching and twitching for flies. As a matter of fact, to find one cow with a fly on her face was doing something.

How can this be, you ask? Well, adorning these bovine beauties were two white 'earrings'. These innocent looking ear tags, I learned, pack a whallop for flies that gets them off the cow's back.

One of the field day participants asked me to find out what they were made of, who manufactures them, and any other interesting points about these fly tags.

Contacting a Lancaster County livestock equipment store, I learned that these tags were made by Shell Chemical.

The salesperson explained that each of the tags contained a chemical called Rabon. This insecticide tag had to be put through both of the animal's ears.

When asked how long the tags lasted, he informed me that they should be effective against flies for 90 days, or the entire fly season.

Depending on where you shop prices may differ, but this particular supplier said their tags cost $24.75 for 20 tags. He added that if you needed a 'whole bunch' he could do better on the price.

Now, along with the tag, you need to buy a tag applicator. This tool costs $9.50, and is used to put the ear tag through the cow's ear.

Just when you think you have everything you need, the saleman will tell you that when you buy the tags you only bought the 'female' end. To keep the tag in the ear, you'll also need to buy a 'male' back.

Since the supplier wasn't sure just what the tags killed, I contacted Glenn Shirk at the Lancaster Co. Extension Service. He informed me that the tags are advertised to "give some relief from face flies and horn flies." But he added, he has not seen any research data to prove or disprove these claims.

Glenn confirmed the fact that the chem[illegible], was approved for use in Pennsylvania. However, he noted there are possibilities there may be other brands of fly tags on the market.

How do the tags work? According to Glenn, the tags are similar to the flea tags that are worn by dogs and cats, or like the insect strips that emit 'vapors' to kill flies and other insects.

Do they work? Like Glenn mentioned, there is no objective research on the tags at this point that he is aware of. But, looking at the calm, contented cows on the JV Farm, all signs point to a successful campaign against flies.

The tags will have to be weighed as a management tool, requiring extra handling and dollar investment in equipment.

But, it seems that the weight and condition loss in cattle—cows, calves, bulls, or steers—from fighting flies and other insects that can carry various diseases, would far outweight the per head cost for the fly-floppin' ear tags.

What to do for a headache.

George Plitt of Happiness Hills Farms, Addison, N.Y. wrote to Lancaster Farming with a true life happening he said he felt could help save farmers from the headache he experienced.

There is a situation that many farmers need to be made aware of—namely sale involvements with private individuals.

I had sold some hay to a Pennsylvania businessman and recieved a 'bad' check. Finally, after a long delay and through round-about means, I was able to get part of the money.

Mr. Plitt then referred to the series of stories we ran on the Agripson hearings and how the Department of Agriculture stepped in.

Unfortunately, Mr. Plitt, there are no state regulations or agencies that can directly help you with the payment collection problem that I am aware of. You're only alternative to writing it up as a bad lesson in human nature is to contact an attorney and proceed with civil action, it seems.

But you are so right about safeguarding yourself against fraudulent buyers. Too bad most ag products are handled in a way that leaves farmers holding their hands out long after the hay, milk, grain, or livestock is delivered.

Thank goodness, though, for dealers who stake their reputation on honesty and satisfying their customers.

U.S. fertilizer use projected down slightly

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., — U.S. fertilizer use during the 1979-80 year will likely be a little below last year's near-record consumption of 51 million tons, according to Ed Wheeler, president of The Fertilizer Institute.

Wheeler said based on current indications, the year ending June 30 should close with sales of nitrogen fertilizers at a level about the same as one year ago, sales of phosphate fertilizers down from five to eight percent and potash consumption at the same level or off slightly.

At the same time, retailer inventories will be virtually cleaned out with remaining fertilizer inventories held at "up-river" or wholesale warehouses.

"I must tell you, candidly, I believe we will have a long, slow summer and early fall," Wheeler said, referring to domestic markets, but he also expressed firm belief in steady growth of U S. fertilizer exports.

Orders to refill retail inventories may be slow in coming, Wheeler suggested, primarily because of unsettled farm grain and fertilizer prices, as well as a heavily-logged rural credit situation, even though interest rates are falling.

The bright spot for the 1980-81 fertilizer year lies in exports, indicated the Institute head

"We can expect renewed interest in U.S. nitrogen and phosphates. The export market will show life – not a boom – but good, solid prospects. Wheeler pointed out that U.S. ammonia will become highly competitive in world markets as present and future feedstock prices in Northern Europe and Far East for naphtha and North Sea natural gas drive ammonia plants, in those areas, "to the wall".

The current U.S. export market, in a fluctuating state recently, is stabilizing, Wheeler said. "We have a firm, solid point on which to build phosphate product exports to, or beyond, levels of a year ago," he said.

"American fertilizer production efficiency and dependability, coupled with a steady, realistic appraisal of the world market, should prove a mainstay for the U.S. fertilizer industry in 1981," Wheeler added

Wheeler emphasized the likelihood that government would step in to bolster the agricultural economy. "We anticipate very heavy pressure on the Congress in January 1981 for a new and generous farm program, if the farm economy fails to rally in the meantime, Wheeler said.

Even urban Congressmen know a further dip in farm income would be disaster not only for farmers, but for the nation's food supply, as well, he pointed out, and added the value to the nation's economy of farm exports is well-recognized, too.

"Even if high set-aside acreage is established, experience shows that this does not necessarily mean a drop in fertilizer sales," he noted, since farmers tend to fertilize well those acres that are planted.

Wheeler reminded fertilizer executives that the fortunes of the U.S. industry rely heavily on the fortunes of the American farmer and on his ability to produce efficiently and profitably through any "economic storm."

Horse owners beware EIAV

FLEMINGTON, NJ — June is the start of mosquito season and that brings to mind a strong suggestion for horse owners. Mosquitoes transmit two of the state's most serious horse diseases — eastern and western encephalitis.

Equines can effectively be vaccinated to protect them from these two diseases. The vaccine is good for only one year, so vaccinations must be renewed annually and now's the time!

- Test your equine friend for EIA, equine infectious anemia also known as swamp fever, while you have the vet in. You especially need a negative EIA (Coggins) test if your horse is transported to shows and other activities.

Del. rainmaking program to begin its third year

DOVER, Del. — The 1980 Delaware Weather Modification Program started on June 10 and will continue through September 10, 1980.

This is the third year of the multi-year program designed to determine if weather modification techniques can increase summer rainfalls. As in the past two years, the Department of Agriculture is managing the program for the State.

The cloud seeding operations will be conducted by the Colorado International Corporation under direction of the Secretary of Agriculture. As in the two previous years, the Secretary is advised by the Weather Modification Advisory Committee concerning policy decisions and local crop moisture conditions.

The Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station, College of Agricultural Sciences and University of Delaware will be evaluating the results of the program.

Mark G. Kooker, administrative assistant to the secretary, said the weather modification technique being tested is Dynamic Cloud Seeding.

Kooker explained that dynamic cloud seeing uses airborne application to place minute amounts of silver iodide smoke into towering cumulus clouds to stimulate cloud growth. The cloud seeding pilot selects a cell of clouds with a high potential for rainfall and then places the silver iodide smoke into the freezing zone of the clouds.

Seedable cells usually have several towering cumulus clouds that are at least 10,000 feet tall with their tops in the minus 5° to 10°C range. As the seeded clouds grow and merge, they are able to process larger amounts of moisture from the atmosphere.

Kooker stressed that the type of clouds being seeded normally would have produced rainfall and that the program is to determine if their rainfall can be increased through seeding.

The operational portion of this year's program will be based at the Sussex County Airport in Georgetown. Colorado International Corporation cloud seeding crew is headed by Lawrence "Bud" Youngren of Rapid City, South Dakota, the program manager.

The other members of CIC's crew are Robert Hudson, Baltimore, Maryland, the pilot and Robert Winnery, Damascus, Ohio, the electrical engineer.

Maryland seeks Pork Cookout contests

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The Maryland Pork Producers Association once again is seeking all wizards of the outdoor grill to test their taste talents in the state's annual Pork Cookout contest to be held at the State Fair.

In cooperation with the Maryland Department of Agriculture's Division of Marketing, MPPA will host the cookout on Friday, August 29 at the Timonium Fairgrounds' Cow Palace. Besides cooking honors, a top prize of $100 will be up for grabs.

To enter the contest, write your recipe out with complete ingredients, preparation and cooking directions using fresh pork and submit it to Leo Kahl, 3821 Perry Hall Road, Perry Hall, MD., 21128. Be sure to include your complete home address and telephone number.

Entries must be received by August 1. Ten finalists will be selected to take part in the contest and will be notified in plenty of time for their appearance at the cookoff.

MPPA will supply the grills and Fair tickets for the contestants.

Main stress in the selection of finalist recipes will be originality, ease of preparation, and suitability for outdoor grilling.

Lancaster District holds conservation tour

LANCASTER — Storm water management, hydro-electric generation, forest management, soil conservation, manure management, and a chicken barbecue lunch highlighted the Lancaster County Conservation District's Conservation Tour on June 10th.

"The interest in a conservation field day and plowing contest has waned in the last few years," said J. Everett Kreider, chairman of the Tour Committee," so we set up this tour to visit a variety of conservation-related sites in Southern Lancaster County"

The tour started at 8:30 a.m. at the Farm and Home Center. First stop was the Willow Valley Shopping Center where the storm water retention basin controls water from a 55-acre watershed and releases it at a rate of a 10-year frequency storm, a safe non-erosive rate.

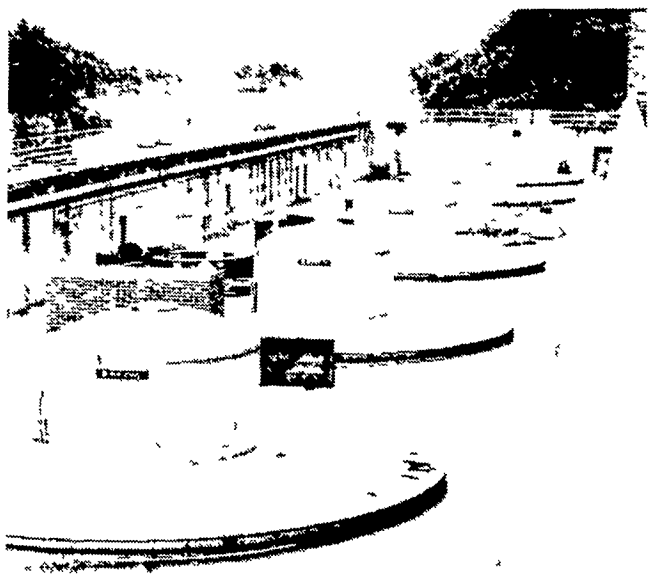
Forestry practices were discussed at the Steinman Farm, Martic, Township, which won the regional Maurice K. Goddard Forestry Award in 1979.

Producing electricity by hydro-electric generation was the subject at Philadelphia Electric's Muddy Run pump storage plant. Water is pumped during low demand hours on weekends to a storage reservoir 400 feet above the power plant This water is then run back through turbine to produce electricity during peak use times.

Following a chicken barbecue lunch which was prepared by Philadelphia Electric, Enn Kotkas, a marine biologist discussed the future of Shad fishing in the Susquehanna and steps Philadelphia Electric will be taking to install a fish ladder on the Conowingo Dam.

Pipe outlet terraces were viewed at Kenny Probst's farm and the manure management facilities at Bob Kauffman's farm in Drumore Township were viewed in the afternoon.

Future tours will be planned by the LCCD to view other areas of conservation interest in Lancaster County



Philadelphia Electric's Muddy Run pump-storage hydro-electric plant pumps water during the low demand hours on weekends to Muddy Run reservoir. This water is run through turbines during peak hours on weekdays to supply heavy demands by customers.

About 55 people took a look at some of the county's conservation work during the Lancaster Co. Conservation District's tour on June 10. Here the group visited the Steinman Farm, Martic Twp., to look at forest management practices.

Old fashion country day slated

DELTA — The small borough of Delta is prepared to welcome several thousand guests this Saturday, June 21 to celebrate its Centennial Anniversary of the incorporation of Delta in 1880.

A special "Old Fashion Country Day and Farm Tour Hayride" is planned, free of charge, for anyone wishing to take a close look at "life down on the farm", and many other special events are planned in and around Delta Saturday between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

The purpose of the day-long event is to promote better understanding between farmers and their urban neighbors, according to Kay Taylor, co-chairperson of the program, sponsored by the York County Farmers' Association and the Delta Centennial Committee. Margie Fifer is the other co-chairperson. Both women are farm wives.

Headquarters for all events is the Delta Community Center, located off State Route 851, in Delta.

Persons wishing to take one of two farm tours should go to the Community Center to catch a shuttle bus. Once they arrive at the farm, participants will be transported by tractor and wagon

The first tour will start at 9 a.m. and the last one will be at 2 p.m.

Here are the farms the general public will be touring:

David and Barbara Stewart, dairy farm; Cooper and Marley Boyd, orchard; John Rush and Barbara Baldwin, III, beef and hog; Dave and Mary Catherine Thompson, dairy farm and milk jugger; Mel and Marge Fifer, strawberries and vegetables (pick your own), and Joseph and Lois Ailes and son, Eddie, hog.

Many other activities are planned at the Community Center and in the borough itself.

Kutztown Folk Festival starts Saturday

KUTZTOWN — Crafts will be increased this year at the annual Folk Festival here. During the 31st event, Saturday, June 28 through Saturday, July 5, almost 200 experts will demonstrate old life styles and customs of the Pennsylvania Dutch people.

To accommodate some of the crafts, a new Arts & Crafts Building has been opened this year, and included among the demonstrators will be a new brass lamp maker, shadow glass or silhouettes, new toleware and ceramic craftsmen, tinlid creations, and leaded glass.

In addition, the original Arts & Crafts Building and the craft stalls will have many of the popular demonstrators returning, — Evelyn Spanninger and her toleware; Robert Blanchard and his pottery; John Dreibelbis, weaving; Horman Foose, tinware; the Klines, decorated furniture; Lois Harting, fraktur; and Charlotte Schuster, painted ironware.

Food, always in top demand by visitors, will be abundant and in great variety. Soft pretzels and funnel cakes — to munch as you go; the Dutch fried potatoes, corn-on-the-cob, watermelon, and ox-roast sandwiches for those who prefer snacks; and at Windsor Castle food pavilion the "eat 'til you ouch" large family-style meal, — a challenge to the hearty eaters!

Amish pageantry and the two-hour pageant about the Plain People will interest many visitors, along with the in-depth programs of the Seminar Stage, explaining the why's and wherefore's of Pennsylvania Dutch culture.

INTRODUCING

RUMA PASS

The complete dairy feed that cuts protein costs while maintaining your milk production.

If you think high milk production requires high protein, think again.

New Master Mix Ruma Pass for corn and sorghum silage feeding programs lets you feed less protein without a loss in milk production. So you save on protein while your cows continue producing at their present level.

Ruma Pass contains by-pass proteins which are not easily digested in the rumen, but are readily digested in the small intestine. The net result is more usable protein with less waste.

And you pocket the savings.

Farm Talk

Jerry Webb

As difficult as it is to get started in farming these days there still seems to be plenty of young ment willing to take the chance, if they can get a little encouragement and a little financial support. And though I believe farming may someday be a closed business where only those born into it can get a start, at least at this point that's not the case.

Today we look at a case history describing what a Kansas farmer did when he wanted to retire with some income and yet wasn't ready to sell out. In fact, he wanted to turn his operation over to a grandson.

Herb Krehbiel owns a large, well-equipped cropping operation involving some 1100 acres of land and an equipment inventory of about $70,000. When it came time to retire a few years ago, he set about organizing a business structure that would allow his 27-year-old grandson, Tom Stucky, to take over.

Stucky lacked the finances to buy outright or even make a down payment, so in consort with lawyers and tax accountants they came up with a rental plan.

It started with a machinery list that included eight tractors, three combines, four plows, five grain drills, three trucks, and miscellaneous farm tools. The machinery was then appraised to establish a fair rental price, one that both men could agree to.

In practice, the agreement works this way. The farm operates on a crop-share lease with the landlord getting 40 percent and the tenant getting 60 percent.

Half of Stucky's 60 percent goes to Krehbiel as rent on the machinery. Stucky keeps the other 30 percent as return for his labor and to cover his operating expenses. Meanwhile, the machinery still belongs to the grandfather who continues to pay the taxes on it.

The grandson pays all operating expenses and repair bills which are tax deductible. Fertilizer and insecticide costs are divided also on a 40/60 basis.

As a means of buying in on a gradual basis, the deal calls for Stucky to buy new equipment as needed. That must be paid for from his 30 percent of the farm's gross income.

Every young man who wants to get into farming doesn't have a grandfather with 110 acres and a full line of machinery. But some do, and some other young men know farmers, or in fact may be working for farmers who are interested in retiring and, who are looking for a business way to turn over their operation.

Krehbiel says under this arrangement he doesn't have to worry so much about the day-to-day farming, but still doesn't have the money to buy it.

He might also be wiped out in the process of settling his grandfather's estate.

He needs to have a substantial operation to provide a living on the small share that will be left after he pays such a large share to his grandfather for both land and equipment rental.

And, depending on the condition of the equipment, he may have to buy machinery faster than he can build equity to borrow on.

Assuming there is good feeling between grandfather and grandson, or for that matter between a farmer and a young hired man, such an arrangement might work quite well. It does offer the young man a way to take charge and to get the full experience of running his own farming operation.

If he's successful, his equity will increase and his knowledge and earnings will increase to the point where he can take on land purchase someday. And it's one of the few ways that a young man can start with virtually nothing and gain control of a susbstantial farm business.

There are some Internal Revenue pitfalls in this arrangement if not properly set up. Any farmer who is considering it should first talk to a lawyer or an accountant who understands thoroughly the income tax implication.

he can still get involved if he wants to.

In fact, he likes to run a combine so during the busy harvest season he provides extra labor. And yet if he wants to go fishing or take a trip he's not tied to the farm.

The crop-share arrangement reduces the amount of capital needed by the young farmer. He's not required to cough up the tremendous amount of land rent required for most cash rental deals, and in this case he doesn't even have an initial investment in machinery.

Obviously there are some pitfalls; Stucky could be farming for a number of years and find one day that the farm is up for sale and he

White House Conference on Families meets in Baltimore

UNIVERSITY PARK — Over 600 delegates to the White House Conference on Families in Baltimore last week cast their ballots on 60 issues. Issues were drawn from reports submitted by Pennsylvania and other Eastern states and territories and from testimony presented at seven regional hearings across the country.

Pennsylvania's 81 delegates voted on issues relating to challenges and responsibilities of families and ranked "substance abuse" as a top concern. Their recommendations urged:

Schools, K-12, and agencies should provide preventive programs with information concerning dangers of alcohol, drug abuse, abuse of prescription drugs and the necessity of positive parental example.

Media should avoid showing drugs as a cure-all and must provide equal time to counteract alcohol commercials.

Prevention programs should involve parental meetings, both with and without children, to educate both on substance abuse.

And medical professionals should have extensive training on drug abuse, especially prescription drugs and alcohol.

Another recommendation eliciting approval for action concerned home care support of the elderly and their families as an alternative to institutionalization. Recommended by the delegates were:

Changes in Medicaid/Medicare policies to reflect home care support.

Tax benefits to cover costs of homemaker services, day and night care, transportation and necessary home improvements.

Locally developed services (telephone reassurances, meals on wheels, friendly visiting, companionship, dial-a-ride and respite care.

And funding help to elderly individuals to enable them to maintain their own homes.

Pennsylvania's participants in the Pennsylvania Forum on Families, the state's pre-White House activity, also followed The White House Conference lead.

They recommended financial help for families who want to keep their elderly members with them in the home, according to James Van Horn, Extension family sociologist at Penn State and project director, the Pennsylvania Forum on Families. Van Horn also served as a delegate to The White House Conference.

Meeting set on Trail question

CARLISLE — A meeting is slated for July 14 to bring together all sides in the current dispute over relocation of the Appalachian Trail in the Cumberland Valley.

The meeting, called by the Pennsylvania State Grange, will be held at the Embers Motor Inn near Carlisle beginning at 8 p.m.

The Grange is attempting to gather together farmers. members of the Appalachian Trail Conference, the National Park Service, and other interested parties for the meeting.

The Trail currently follows roads for most of the distance across the Cumberland Valley from above New Kingston in the north to below Boiling Springs in the South.

The Trail Club, with financial help from the NPS, is attempting to relocate the Trail onto what now is privately owned farmland.

Farmers have said they fear the proposal will hamper their current farming operations.

Gallop Poll on families released

UNIVERSITY PARK — From New York to California there's a ringing endorsement of the importance of the family in American life.

Americans place top priority on the family, according to a recent Gallop Poll, commissioned by the White House Conference on Families and made public at last week's Baltimore Conference.

The first comprehensive survey on the American family, the poll also pinpointed the strengths and problems faced by American families. These were echoed by over 600 participants from 17 Eastern states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands who voted on recommendations concerning the family and its well-being at the Baltimore meeting.

Top concerns of American families include employment opportunities and personnel policies that enable persons to hold jobs while maintaining a strong family life White House Conference delegates voted to recommend that labor, business and government promote and implement flexitime, flexible leave policies for both sexes, job sharing programs, dependent car options and part-time jobs with pro-rated pay and benefits. This recommendation received the most yes votes among other recommendations in the Families and Economic Well-being category.

Pennsylvania's report to The White House Conference reflected Commonwealth participants' concerns about employment and the family. Flexitime, job sharing, maternity leave and other employment-related concerns were recommendations made at regional hearings and local family forums across the state, according to James E. Van Horn, Extension family sociologist at Penn State and a delegate to the White House Conference. Van Horn was also director of the Pennsylvania Forum on Families, the state's pre-White House Conference project.

Other areas of concern and subsequent Conference recommendation were also shared by Pennsylvanians. State participants and White House delegates asked that the President propose and the Congress enact legislation "to provide for the equitable taxation of two-worker married couples." Recommended was the elimination of the marriage penalty by permitting married individuals the option of using the tax rate for single individuals.

The final report from the White House Conferences in Baltimore, Minneapolis and Los Angeles will be presented to the President and Congress in August, 1980, advocating policy changes called for in Conference recommendations.

York County crowns new dairy princess

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

BAIR — When a former contestant and friend of Tina Neufeld's urged her to enter the York County Dairy Princess pageant, Tina really didn't expect to win. And the surprise was evident on the hazel-eyed lass' face when she was called to center stage to receive the crown and banner as the highlight of last Saturday night's annual ceremonies at the 4-H Center.

Eighteen-year-old Tina is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Neufeld, York R4 She's a recent graduate of Hamburg High School, with plans to attend Shippensburg State College in the Fall. Her career goal is to teach mentally disturbed children, or work in a related aspect of special education.

A National Honor Society scholar, Tina was a member of the Hamburg FFA and served as her class secretary.

She's been in 4-H for seven years, has carried dairy projects and is currently the owner of a steer and a sheep.

York County Dairy Princess Tina Neufeld is presented her crown and banner by outgoing princess Carol Druck.

The dairy industry in York County will be represented by their newly-selected royal ladies: from left, Jill Stanford, second runner-up, Tina Neufeld, York dairy princess, and first-runner up Angie Eyster.

One of her favorite 4-H leadership activities was working with the Hamburg State Center for the mentally retarded. Tina is also active in her church serving as pianist for the choir and a member of the youth group.

Since her graduation earlier this month, Tina has gone to work full-time on her parents 130-cow milking operation. She classifies herself as the "go-fer," helps with the milking as needed, and handles a variety of jobs

Bootmaker and Kingpin, two of the greatest names in the Holstein breed. Bootmaker has been dead over four years, Kingpin over twice that long. They are still held in very high regard. MONEY-MAKER is a result of crossing these two great sires. MONEY-MAKER is siring the milk (+1828M) and the type (+1.22) you would expect from this great cross. If you want MILK, and you want TYPE, and you want the influence of BOOTMAKER and KINGPIN, call your local ABS Representative and ask for MONEY-MAKER.

The Neufeld family includes two boys and five girls, and milk is marketed through Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers, Inc.

First runner-up is 16-year-old Angela Eyster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Eyster of Spring Grove R4. A senior at Spring Grove Area High School, she's a member of the school's marching band and the National Honor Society.

Jill Stanford, 18, was named the second runner-up. She's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Stanford of Dillsburg R1 and a recent graduate of Trinity High School, where she was a cheerleader and member of the band and choir.

Other contestants in the annual dairy-month pageant were Kathy Neufeld, 20, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Neufeld, and Melinda Innerst, 16, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Innerst, Red Lion R3.

Contestants were all required to present an original radio promotional spot, speak briefly on a question concerning the comparison of chocolate milk to imitation chocolate drink and answer a "fish-bowl" question.

In her final official speech, outgoing princess Carol Druck thanked York farmers for their promotional efforts, saluted her parents for their support and gave gifts of appreciation to pageant chairman Kathy Lehman and assistant June Boyer.

During the September state pageant, Carol was named the first runner-up Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and made numerous appearances on both the county and state levels. She cited as one of the most impressive happenings during her reign her recent attendance at a dairy event in Syracuse, New York, where she met a cousin she never knew existed.

Entertainment during the program was provided by The Farmers' Daughters, a ten-member musical group formed from within the York Society of Farm Women.

Judges for the competition were Marian Brenneman, Mt. Joy R1, a dairy farm wife and regional chairman for the women's committee of the Pennsylvania Farmers Association; Debra Brubaker, Manheim R2 dairy farm wife and a former state princess; and John Blyholder of the Pennsylvania Guernsey Breeders Association.

Martin Gray, manager of Sinking Springs Farm and Farm Director for WSBA-radio served as the master of ceremonies.

Hostesses at the refreshment table were former princesses Beth Beall Reiller, Susan Adams Becker and Patricia Greek. Georgia Amspacher is secretary-treasurer of the pageant. Other committee chairmen included Karen Laughman, decoration and flowers, Larry Amspacher, entertainment, Kathy King, refreshments, and Emilie Welsh, publicity.

Live plants for the garden-theme stage decorations were courtesy of Shiloh Nurseries, with other staging from Wicker Imports.

CECIL DAIRY SERVICE SALUTES FARMERS FOR JUNE DAIRY MONTH

DE LAVAL

HERD MASTER PROGRAM

The ultimate and total automation of the dairy farm. Probably no other type of farming has a greater need for automation than does the modern dairy operation. Each day of the year tons of feed must be moved. A large amount of waste disposed of and thousands of pounds of milk handled. Good management is made all the more difficult by variations in the work load (which becomes intent during milking hours) and the pressures of operating according to tight and inflexible schedules. It is easy to understand why the dairy farmer has always been so quick to adopt new and better ways of running his complex business. It is also easy to understand why the busy dairyman has always preferred DeLaval Equipment. For more than 100 years DeLaval has always been the supplier that has made the major break through It was the very first company to offer the cream separator, commercial milking machines, pipeline systems, automatic washing equipment and now a new innovative feeding system. Each has made the dairy farmers day more efficient and his life easier.

Now in the tradition of DeLaval leadership comes the announcement of the boldest concept ever

THE HERDMASTER SYSTEM

It's goal is nothing less than total automation of the dairy farm.

The majority of dairymen would agree that getting the right nutrition to the right cow at the right time is their single biggest concern.

is designed to meet

You are now able to feed every cow in the herd the exact ration she needs for optimum milk production, reduced labor, more milk, less wasted feed, healthier cows, shortened calving intervals These are some of the reasons why the new DELAVAL RATION MASTER MODULE belongs on your dairy farm

Mr J B. Osborne and Mr Larry Coale from Cecil Dairy Service have attended the training school on installation and service of the RATION MASTER to qualify us as the only dealer in this area to sell and service this unique system of feeding cows

We are happy we can sell and install such fine merchandise. It doesn't matter what milking system you already own, we can custom install this on your dairy farm as long as you are loose housing your herd

mower-crimper KM 240

Latest machine to join the Vicon mower range is the new trailed KM mower-crimper, which incorporates the same cutter bar as the Vicon Discus disc mower CM 240. Mounted above the mower bar are a pair of profiled rubber rolls which condition the crop immediately after cutting. The conditioning effect can be varied by changing the pressure between the rolls. Setting the machine for transport or action is done hydraulically. Skids can be set for various cutting heights. A collapsible shield and a cover of heavy duty plastic provide for guards according to international safety standards.

Lancaster Farming goes caving

BY SHEILA MILLER

VIRGINVILLE — The weather is hot and sticky, the kids are complaining because they can't go swimming to cool off, it looks like there's a thunderstorm brewing, and you're ready for a break.

Why don't you load the kids up in the car and head for a cave. Within an hour's drive from the Lancaster area are several of the state's best caves and caverns.

Like Ann Rizzo, one of the owners of Onyx Cave, said, "A cave is a great place to bring the kids when it's hot because the cave's temperature generally stays right at the 50 degree Farenheit mark. And, if it's raining, you don't have to worry because you'll be inside the cave."

Owning and operating Onyx Cave is a relatively new venture for Ann and her husband, Louis. She told Lancaster Farming they bought the property from Gordon Frazer three years ago.

Ann recalled that getting started was a bit tough because she and her husband had never had any experience owning a cave. This was strictly a business venture, she said.

Theresa Rizzo opens the door to adventure, as she guides a tour through the family-run Onyx Cave.

A sign on the inn built by Crystal Cave's first owner, Samuel D.F. Kohler, welcomes the novice and experienced caver to view the delicate formations created deep within the Berks County hillside.

Caving

the Berks County farm country from Philadelphia with their six children. Their oldest daughter, Theresa, helps in managing the cave and giving guided tours. The others lend their hands to the necessary work of painting picnic tables and keeping the grounds in tip-top shape.

There is a relaxed feeling surrounding Onyx Cave. When you pull into the graveled parking area after winding down the rural Berks roads lined with beautiful farms, you won't be beseiged with neon signs and tourist-trap propaganda.

Actually, unless you double check the sign at the entrance, you won't be sure you're at the right spot. The cave and the Rizzo's office blend in with the quiet surroundings.

Outside there is a little picnic grove where families can relax with a basket lunch, or just absorb the sounds and smells of nature between tours.

Inside the office, the Rizzos continue the rock and fossil museum established by the former owner. During the 10-15 minute wait between tours, visitors are encouraged to look around at the collection and view a unique film about caves.

to Kutztown State College for help. They showed us this film on caves and cave formations.

"We learned so much from the film that we decided our visitors might enjoy seeing it too," said Ann.

The film explains how caves are 'born' and how the various formations that can be found in caves are formed from mineral water dripping from the cave ceilings or cracks in the walls.

After the educational prep-talk, visitors can casually stroll down to the cave's entrance with their competent tour guide, one of the Rizzo family members.

The cave is strikingly natural, with only the artificial white lights breaking the darkness of its interior.

Wrapped in a welcome sweater, a visitor feels a rush of cool, damp air after stepping inside—a sharp contrast to the stifling heat outside the cave's mouth.

The tour guide, with flashlight in hand, leads the way through the cave,down gravel paths and up wooden steps, pointing out low passages and interesting stalactites, natural bridges, and possible human remains.

Visitors can quench their thirst by sipping some of the crystal clear, cold water that is found in pools.

According to Ann Rizzo, Onyx cave was discovered in 1872 by Isaac Adams. She explained that Adams, the farm owner, was mining for limestone and accidently stumbled into the cave

Since its discovery, the cave has had a new owner seven times, she said, noting that Gordon Frazer owned the cave for 20 years before they bought it from him.

During the depression, the owner of the cave could not meet his financial obligations and the bank took over the property, renting it to college students who destroyed a lot of the formations during their stay, Rizzo sighed.

Onyx Cave, which is 922 feet long, was actually formed millions of years ago. It gets its name from the mineral, calcium carbonate, which crystallizes into the 'gem' called onyx which takes 365-400 years to 'grow' one inch.

Theresa explained that cave onyx is also known as 'worry stone'. "You carry a piece of it around with you and rub it whenever you're worried. It helps ease your

480-foot heifer barn makes maximum use of sun

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

WASHINGTON BORO — A 480-foot open-sided heifer barn being built on the Star Rock Farms of Abram and John Barley makes maximum use of both Mother Nature and man-made mechanical ingenuity to provide improved and more individual animal care.

The barn, which is in the final stages of construction north of their 376-foot-long free-stall barn, will have a capacity for about 300 head of heifers from the time they leave the calf hutches until they are bred and checked for pregnancy.

The construction began in late March and should be completed within the next few weeks.

The barn's layout scheme, which the Barleys based on existing plans but modified considerably to meet their own needs and accomplish their own purposes, offers the following features:

—Despite its immense size, the barn is equipped with swinging gates that can divide it into 40 individual, spacous pens.

—Opening to the south, the barn's location in relation to the angle of the sun and its steep-pitched roof make maximum use of solar drying of bedding and manure, providing the greatest amount of shade during the summer and the most sunlight during the winter.

—The barn will permit continued utilization of existing feeding and manure disposal systems.

—A variety of bedding will be able to be used in the barn and requirements will be about the same as for free stalls, with additons made about once a week. Also, mechanized distribution of bedding will be possible.

—It will be equipped with automatic head-locks in the feeding area which can be utilized for treatment and later breeding purposes. The head-locks will also swing out to permit loading and unloading into the individual pens of the barn.

—Division of the barn into the individual pens will even permit the housing of animals of all sizes, such as dry cows or bull calves which the Barleys are now raising.

The Barleys also have made a recent addition to their free-stall barn, which includes a sick bay and box stall. This new wing allows segregation of special cows, who may require extra attention due to problems, and permits separation of those cows being treated with antibiotics from the remainder of the milking herd.

"The new heifer barn is a modification of the VPI (Virginia Polytechnical Institute) counter-sloping plan," explains John Barley.

"But our raised bedding areas are flat and don't slope toward the scraping aisle.

"And we wanted everything under roof, including the feeding area.

"The barn actually combines the best advantages of the VPI plan

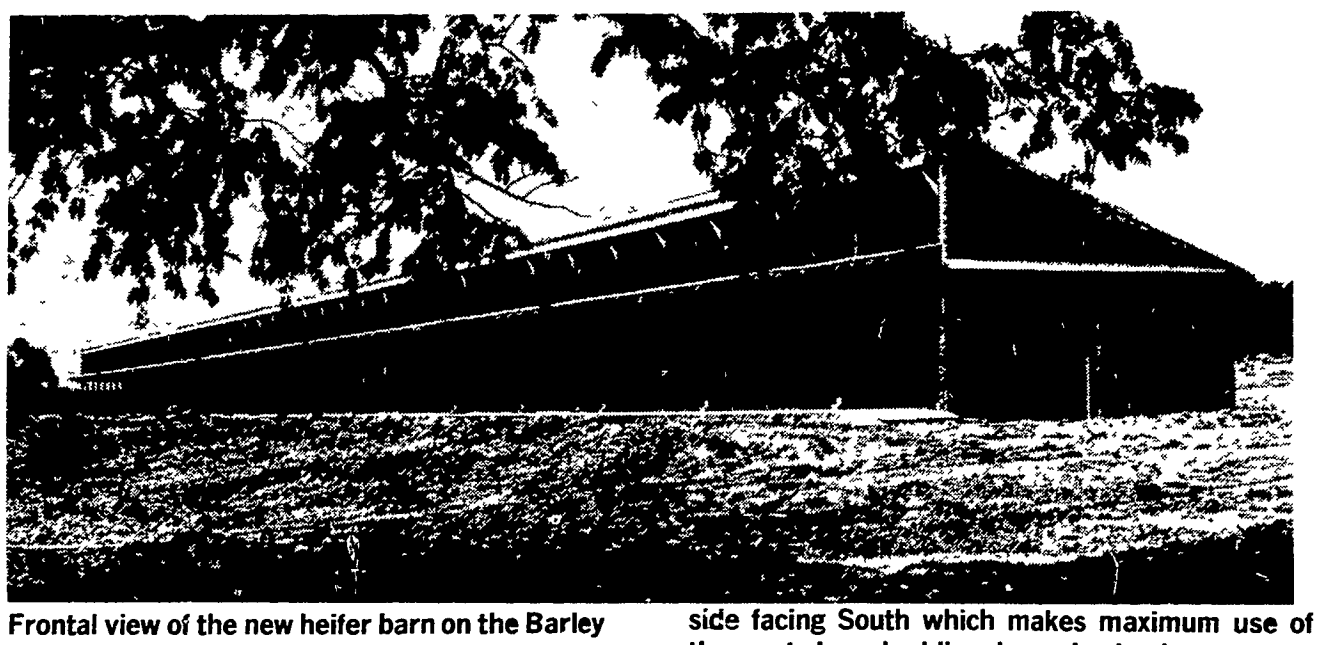
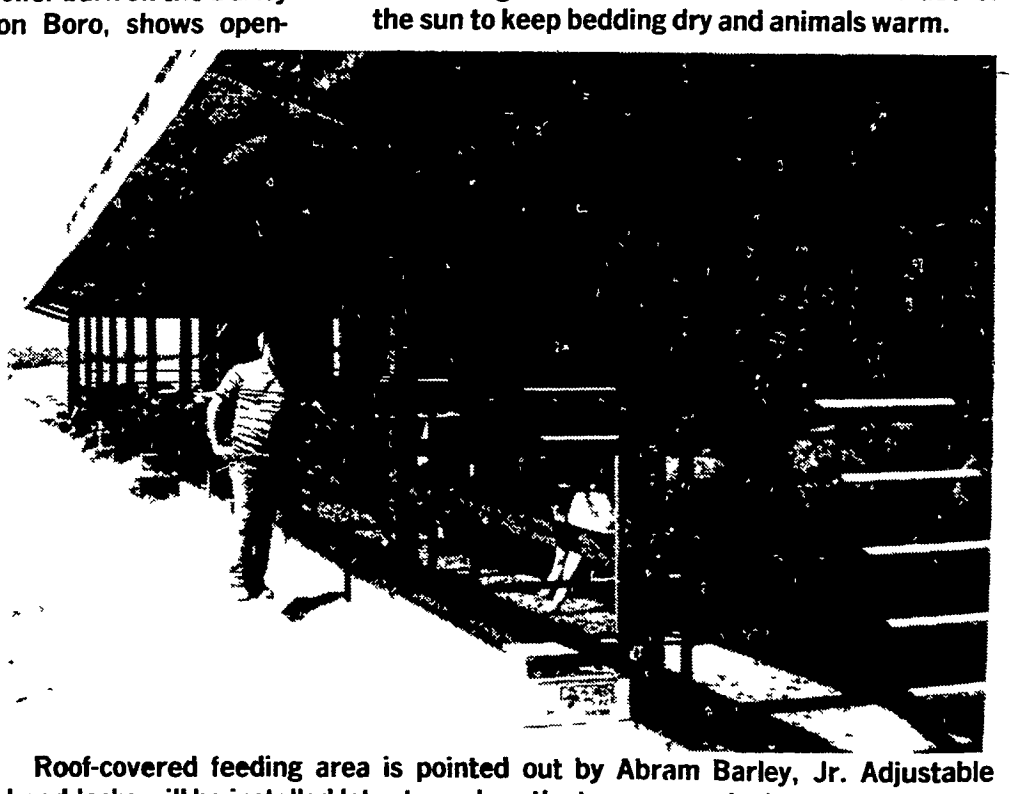
Overall view of Star Rock Farms shows 376 foot long freestall barn to the left and new 480 foot long heifer barn to the right. Construction on the new heifer barn should be completed within the next several weeks.

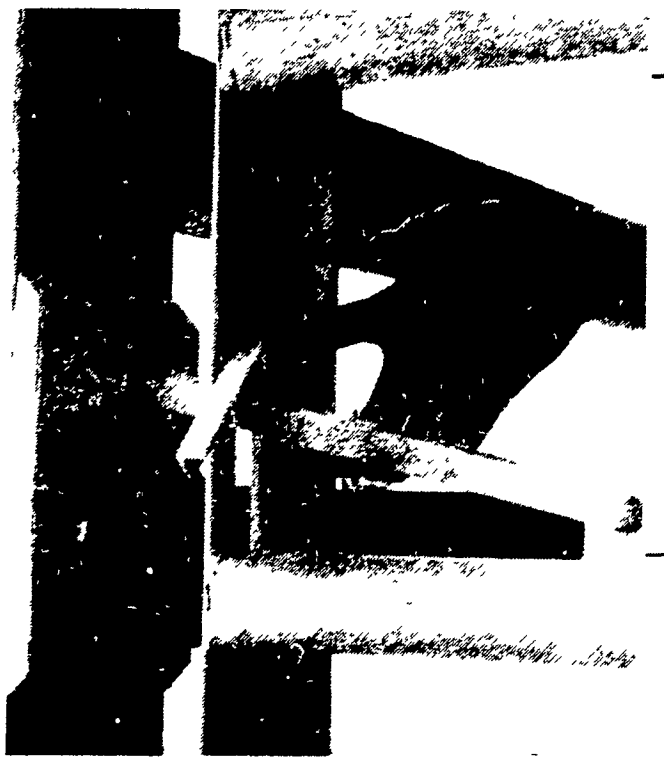


Frontal view of the new heifer barn on the Barley Brothers' farm, Washington Boro, shows open-side facing South which makes maximum use of the sun to keep bedding dry and animals warm.

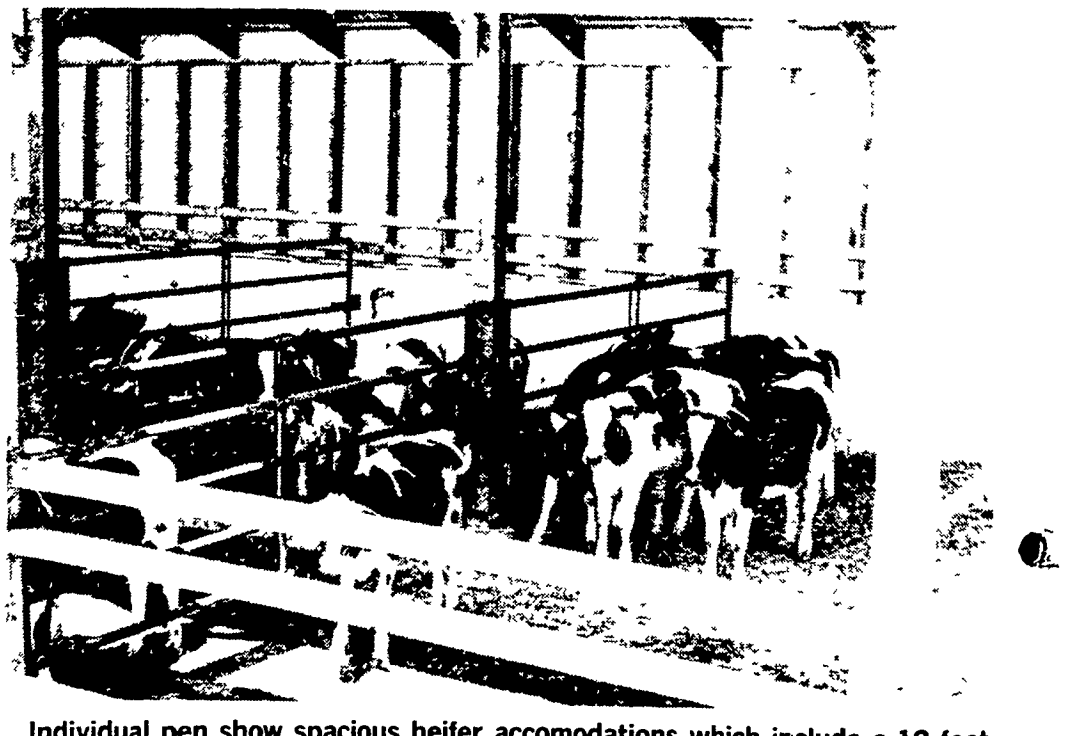
Swinging gates, which were fabricated right on the farm, are demonstrated by Abram, left, and John Barley.



Roof-covered feeding area is pointed out by Abram Barley, Jr. Adjustable head-locks will be installed later to replace the temporary plank enclosure.



Locking latch on the swinging gates, which separate the heifer barn into separate 12 foot pens, feature a safety device which should be calf-proof.



Individual pen show spacious heifer accomodations which include a 12 foot square bedding area and an equal sized space in the scraping aisle.

nerves and you wind up with a polished, semi-precious stone."

She explained that the onyx in their cave is the color of honey, rather than the black onyx most people are familiar with. The black onyx, she said, is only found in New Mexico

Demonstrating its translucence, Theresa held her flashlight against an onyx stalagmite which let the light shine through its semi-transparent shape.

Theresa reassures her touring guests that they are safe when inside the cave. She tells them geologists claim nothing has moved naturally inside the cave for 3500 years.

To add credibility to her statement, she beams her flashlight to a fallout shelter sign deep within the cave This sign, she said, was placed there by the civil defense so she knows she'll be safe inside the cave in case of a nuclear attack.

Theresa is a delightful tour guide, answering questions about the cave with mystery and humor.

When explaining about the 125 foot long natural bridge that angles through the cave, she tells her guests that the bridge is strong enough to support the weight of an elephant . . . "but who ever heard of getting an elephant into a cave, much less up there."

And at one point in the tour, she let the cave visitors get a feel for how dark the cave actually can be without lights. After they're convinced that they can't see their hands waving inches in front of their faces, she hauntingly says, "It cost you $3 to get into the cave—what's it worth to get out?"

As her guests laugh nervously and give sighs of relief as she switches the lights back on, Theresa tells how the water level inside the cave fluctuates with the weather. She relates that in dry spells, the water actually dries up and the cave becomes dormant. When Hurricane Agnes went through, she said, the cave was completely filled with water.

"When the cave is dormant and there is no water dripping from the ceilings, the cave formations cannot grow. If the water never comes back, over the years the formations will begin to flake away and disintegrate "

As the tour ends, Theresa explains that since their family took over the cave they have done something special at Halloween—they 'haunt' the cave.

Using colored lights and other special effects, the cave takes on an eerie glow, just right for the special mood of Halloween.

"The first year we tried it, we only had it haunted for two weeks," she said. "Now we have it haunted the whole month of October."

Onyx Cave is open 7 days each week from May to Labor Day in September. The hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. They are open weekends during the months of September through November, and March through May.

Admission charges to tour the cave are: adults, $3, and children under 15 years old, $1.50. Children under the age of 6 are free, and senior citizens are only charged $1.75.

Ann Rizzo pointed out that if several families want to tour the cave as a group of at least 15, the admission charge is: adults, $2 and children under 15, $1. She pointed out advanced reservations are needed for groups.

If you follow the signs for Onyx Cave, found scattered around the Hamburg-Kutztown area, there are generally signs marking the way to Crystal Cave nearby.

Less than 5 miles east of Onyx Cave, near Kutztown, the cave enthusiast can take a look at a slightly different type of cave.

If you think when you've seen one cave, you've seen them all, you're in for a big surprise.

As you turn your car into the parking lot of Crystal Cave, you'll notice a difference on the spot—a spacious, paved parking area, large office, food and souvenir shops, Indian tee pees, and a picnic grove give the visitor a more commercial 'hello'.

A strenuous hike up several flights of steps to the cave's entrance keeps the tour guides in tip-top shape and lets the cave guests know they're not as fit as they used to be.

Crystal cave is somewhat older than the 140 million year old Onyx Cave—the tour guide explains that Crystal is estimated to be 190 million years old, still a 'baby' in geological years.

Like Onyx Cave, Crystal was found on November 12,

Major breeds agree on protein pricing

CAMP HILL — Representatives of all the major dairy breeds, except Ayrshire, were on hand last Monday to toss around the possibility of pricing milk on a protein basis.

The Pennsylvania Holstein Association, National All-Jersey Incorporated, Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Club, Pennsylvania Guernsey Breeders, the State Dairymens' Association, and dairy and pricing specialists from Penn State attended the meeting hosted by the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association.

Dennis Derr, PFA's commodities director, said the major fact to come out of the meeting is agreement that protein pricing is not a breed issue.

Most of the representatives said they were more concerned about the good of the industry as a whole rather than their own breed.

But, it was noted, after the initial change-over period, there should not be any major drop in profits under the proposed protein pricing system.

In fact, the move would likely be welcomed by the dairy processors who realize most of their profits from the solids.

The 13 representatives who attended the meeting pointed out any change to protein pricing would not be beneficial until the change was supported by changes in advertising campaigns and national standards for butterfat and solids not fat.

In the long run, the group concluded, a move to protein pricing should improve the industry as a whole.

Present PFA policy recommends promotion of a pricing policy based on solids not fat—protein—and paying the farmer a premium for low bacterial count in the milk.

1871 by two Pennsylvania Dutchmen who were quarrying for limestone. According to the cave history, the two discoverers, Gideon Merkel (the farm owner) and John Gehret, crawled just a few feet inside the cave but didn't go any further because they couldn't see

The two discoverers boasted of their find at the local tavern, and the following day a group of friends and neighbors went to the Merkel farm to take a look at the hole in the hill. This time they were prepared with candles and lanterns.

One of the neighbors was Samuel D. F. Kohler.

Before a year had gone by since the cave was explored by the band of curious farmers, Kohler had purchased the 125 acres of the Merkel farm for the grand price of $5000. The cave history points out that Kohler's main reason for buying the cave was to preserve its beauty and keep it from being destroyed by vandals and curiosity seekers.

As the popularity and the fame of Crystal Cave began to grow, Kohler received requests from visitors to see his cave He had built an entrance soon after he bought the property, and by 1873 he began to charge admission for touring the cave.

Over the years, the cave grew into a business After Kohler's death in 1908, his son, David, took over the operation.

In 1923, when David was 57 years old, he sold the cave to its present owners, Crystal Cave Company, Inc.

Crystal Cave is 1500 feet long. As a visitor walks along the wide paved paths, and climbs up and down the steps that lead to various levels in the cave, they reach a high point of 60 feet from ground level and drop down to the lowest level of 125 feet from ground level.

The stairs and hand railings were added to the cave about 1933 to help facilitate the tours. Just recently, in 1974, the cave was reilluminated and all the electrical wiring concealed to add to the beauty of the delicate cave formations.

Crystal Cave is open daily from Memorial Day Weekend through Labor Day from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., weekends until 7 p.m.

About an hour east of these two Berks County caves is Indian Echo Caverns, near Hummelstown. This vast cave was visited since as early as 1783, and served as the home of a recluse named Amos Wilson, who according to the Indian Echo management, hid inside the cave after his sister's death by hanging in 1785.

Indian Echo Caverns are also open daily during the summer from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

So, take your pick. Enjoy the experience of caving this summer—an inexpensive way to cool off, have fun and learn about nature's underground secrets

480-foot heifer barn

The barn is 24 feet deep and is covered by a steep-pitched roof.

The swinging gates, which the Barleys designed and fabricated from piping, provide 40 individual pen areas. Each pen includes two sections — a 12-foot-square bedding area and an equal-sized scraping aisle area.

Heifers can be confined into the bedding section by swinging the aisle side gate across the front of the bedding area. This will permit cleaning of the aisle with a skid-steer loader.

Then, the animals can be switched to the aisle section when work must be done in the bedding section.

The feeding area is covered with a smaller, lower roof overhang.

"We decided to cover this area, too, because we just don't like the feed to be rained on," Abram Barley said.

"In a way, the barn is the next thing to a big shade tree. It provides a good wind break, also.

"We think open-type confinement is the best way to raise replacements. We're utilizing nature as much as possible and getting the most out of the drying quality of the sun. You know that the best way to get something dry is to put it out in the sun."

The barn faces 20 degrees east of due south to get the most benefit from the sun's rays. The main steep-pitched roof slopes from a height of 19 feet at the open end to 12 feet at the closed end.

There is no eave opening on the closed end to reduce drafts. The large opening facing the south provides ample ventilation.

"The drying effects of the sun should cut down on the bedding requirements and reduce the volume of manure," John Barley said.

"We have some heifers in one end already and it looks as if we will have to add bedding about once a week, similar to free stalls.

"I haven't seen an animal yet lying in the aisle and the bedding sections are staying reasonably clean."

Since the stock can be confined to either the bedding or aisle sections of each pen, the barn can be scraped its entire length with a skid-steer loader. Wastes will be scraped to the middle of the barn where a central scrapeoff opens to the rear. There it is scraped into a pit behind the barn.

The pit area will provide about a year's storage for the 300-head capacity. The pit bottom and ramp ends are to be concreted.

A variety of bedding can be utilized, including sawdust, straw or corn fodder. Since the barn makes maximum use of the sun, it's even possible that wet sawdust could be used.

The Barleys will attempt to rig an old manure spreader for distributing bedding. Higher sides could be added and the beaters slowed down to reduce the distribution pattern. A wagon could be called on when corn fodder is used.

Each pen area is designed to hold 7 or 8 animals, depending on size and age. This should provide sufficient capacity for the approximate 300 replacements the Barleys raise each year.

"We want the individual pens for several reasons," according to John Barley.

"We can keep a better eye on the smaller groups. Calves are like children. In large groups. you always have a few that are a lot more aggressive. The smaller groups cut down on these problems.

"We've been using a converted stanchion barn with individual nursing stalls and free stalls. But it only holds about 100 head.

"We went to hutches and found the calves weren't used to being confined. We had some trouble with their not wanting to lie down in the free stalls.

"We have another barn with conventional loose housing and the groups are too large. Now, we can get rid of these big groups."

The automatic head-locks will be used for treatment, vaccination, blood tests and particularly for breeding.

These also will be designed and fabricated by the Barleys. In addition to swinging open for loading and unloading into individual pens, the openings will be adjustable to accomodate different aged heifers.

Feeding will be done with the same mixer wagon as is used in the free-stall cow barn.

"We like the versatility the barn will give us," the Barleys emphasize.

"We'll have the small groups we want and animals can be segregated for any number of reasons.

"Calves from a special cow can be kept in an individual pen. During the winter, we may even bring in some dry cows. Bull calves could also be kept in some pens.

"When the animals get larger, several sections can be opened into a large pen area.

"Every section and gate is the same and we can interchange them as our needs may change."

Penn Ag members set September convention

EPHRATA — Programmed for the '80's is the theme approved by PennAG Industries Association to describe the 102nd annual meeting of the agribusiness trade group scheduled September 23 to 25 at the Hotel Hershey, Hershey. Gerald Hess of Roaring Spring and Chairman of the Convention Committee said.

"We hope to expose our members to the significant and affordable changes which have occurred in the mini-computer and programmable calculators. In addition we intend to show some of the ways electronics can be used by the typical small and medium business."

In addition, the Committee also approved major program segments on energy, transportation and the mushrooming impact of government regulation. A look at the see-saw economy is also planned.

Industry exhibits, entertainment, a ladies program and athletic events are traditional other features which will be repeated by the oldest statewide trade association of agribusiness in the U.S.

Delaware prepares directory

DOVER, Del. — The 1980 Delaware Roadside and Pick-Your-Own Market Directory for fruits, vegetables and honey is available from the Delaware Department of Agriculture or from local county extension agents' offices.

This is the second of a series of directories that will list the seasonal farm products sold by Delaware's Roadside and Pick-Your-Own Markets.

The directories are designated to assist people in locating Pick-Your-Own and Roadside Markets that sell fresh produce. Customers are encouraged to contact the markets before going to insure product availability. Harvest dates may vary from those listed for specific products due to weather conditions.

Listing in these directories is done on a voluntary basis.

Hearings on storm water will affect ag community

HARRISBURG — If you noticed in last week's Lancaster Farming, A15 the Department of Environmental Resources has scheduled two public hearings on storm water management.

Are these hearings important enough for farmers to take time out of their busy schedules to attend?

According to Khervin Smith, chief of Advisory Services Section in the Division of Storm Water Management, these hearings are important for any person residing in the Commonwealth.

What the hearings are designed to do, he said, is to take down public comment on what the state has proposed in the line of storm water management watersheds.

Smith explained that Act 167, the Storm Water Management Act of 1978, required DER to define the state's watershed areas in order to assist counties in developing a management plan.

Now that their task is accomplished, dividing the state into 386 watershed areas, DER is asking the public if they are happy with the divisions and if there are any changes needed.

How do you know where the state has drawn the line in defining the watershed areas? Smith explained his department has provided maps of the areas to each county. They should be available at the county commissioners' offices, county planning commission offices, and local conservation district offices.

Will Act 167 affect the farming community? According to Smith, the storm water policies of the state include agriculture. However he pointed out that if a farmer is following good conservation practices and erosion and sedimentation control, the present conservation plan should suffice.

Once the watershed designations are adopted by the counties, the processes for setting the criteria and standards for storm water runoff control in the watershed will be set in motion.

Smith noted the legislation does not provide for any financial assistance to local farmers in implementing storm water management practice. "It provides financial bookkeeping reimbursement to the counties only."

The two hearings are scheduled for June 24 and 26, with the locations strategically set in DuBois and Reading, respectively.

Smith said the locations were picked in areas where there hasn't been much input into the watershed designations.

"We expect the DuBois meeting to take care of those people in the western part of the state, although either hearing is open to anyone.

"We chose Reading for the other hearing because in the Southeast we've heard from almost everyone but Berks County. It will give them more opportunity to comment when the hearing is in their county."

The hearings, Smith added, are an input procedure to provide people with the opportunity to comment on "what they want to see as far as storm water management is concerned." It will help them in identifying what needs to be considered when developing land use plans.

Smith explained the comments made at the public hearings will be given to the Environmental Quality Board on July 15 for any recommended changes in the DER watershed index.

"If a county looks at the watershed map and finds the DER divisions are not useful, there is a possibility the index for that county might be thrown out. We'll certainly discuss the situation. And if the recommended changes are reasonable, they will probably be made.

The hearings will be held on Penn State community campuses in both DuBois and Reading. On both June 24 and 26, the sessions will feature an afternoon and evening meeting beginning at 1 p.m. and 7 p.m.

For more information or to provide public comment prior to the meeting, contact Gilbert E. Kyle, director, DER Bureau of Dams and Waterway Management, Box 2357, Harrisburg, PA 17120, telephone 717/783-1384. —SM

This Sunday is Md. farm visitation day

ANNAPOLIS Md — Maryland's annual Farm Visitation Day this year will be run on two dates for the first time in its fourteen-year history.

The traditional early-summer date is Sunday, June 22 at 17 participating farms in nine counties. Three farms in western Maryland's Washington county will be involved in an early-fall Farm Visitation Day on the first Sunday in September, Sept. 7.

Open house hours on both days will run from 1 to 5 p.m. Many of the host farms will offer light refreshments, with cold milk a likely prospect at participating dairy farms.

Intended to give urban families a close look at their farm neighbors, Farm Visitation Day is sponsored each year by the University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service in cooperation with all major farm organizations

Locations for this Sunday's Farm Visitation Day are scattered from the mountain foothills of Frederick county to the flatlands of the Eastern Shore.

Directions and descriptions of all participating farms are listed in a free Farm Visitation Day brochure, titled "A Family Affair" (Leaflet 86).

The leaflet is available from offices of the Extension Service and from public libraries in the participating counties — Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Calvert, Charles, Frederick, Harford, Howard, Montgomery and Queen Annes.

Additional information is available from the office of Roy Porter, extension coordinator of special communications at the University of Maryland in College Park His telephone number, during weekday office hours, is 301/454-3712 or 454-4064.

Nat'l Jr. Shorthorn show is slated for July

MANHATTAN, Ks. — The 1980 National Junior Shorthorn Heifer Show will be held here July 12-15, at the Riley County Fairgrounds, according to Alan K. Sears, Junior activities director for the American Shorthorn Association.

Sears said the over 300 entries expected from across the United States will offer an unprecedented quality show on a national level for any breed.

The event will carry the theme "Decade of Direction" as the Shorthorn/Polled Shorthorn breed enters the 80's. Cattle exhibited in this show by members of the American Junior Shorthorn Association have continued on as national winners in later open competition in the past, Sears said.

"It will be an opportunity for spectators to view some excellent showmanship abilities, quality sportsmanship in youth, and it promises to provide an exhibit of some of the most outstanding cattle to be seen in the country today," he said.

In addition to regular individual classes, special emphasis will be placed on unique competition that includes best bred and owned by Junior exhibitor, best pair owned by Junior exhibitor, best group of four from one state and herdsman awards for state groups. The show will involve competition for some $4.000 in premiums, Sears added.

The three man composite judging system will be used in the placing of the classes that begin at 8 a.m. on Friday, July 18. Serving as members of the placing team will be Robert Douthit from Windholme Farm, Orange, Va.; Dr. Bill Jacobs, California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo, Ca.; and Joe M. Lewis, Larned, Ks.

An added feature of the four day event will be hosted at Kansas State University in Manhattan when keynote speakers will give presentations on a wide variety of topics that pertain directly to the beef cattle industry. This seminar type program, also geared toward "Decade of Direction", will be conducted on the University campus in Weber Hall, beginning at 10 a.m. on Thursday, July 17.

This national youth event is one of several summer activities sponsored by the American Junior Shorthorn Association in cooperation with the American Shorthorn Association, universities and other educational facilities, and firms and individuals interested in the development of youth in the beef cattle industry, Sears said.

Over the years, one thing about Mol-Mix never changed.

Quality.

From the first day that Mol-Mix® was made, the people at National Molasses made it with quality ingredients because they knew a better-quality supplement would mean more net profit for the cattlemen who used it

Today, instead of decreasing or eliminating these quality ingredients because of shortages and higher costs, Mol-Mix has maintained the same level of quality that has made it the liquid leader

BUFFERED RELEASE IS JUST PART OF OUR QUALITY STORY

Occasionally, somebody finds out about one of our unique features and gets really excited about it For example, our buffered release of urea ammonia, heralded by other supplements as a brand-new innovation, has been in Mol-Mix for years to improve its protein-building efficiency And our performance-proven ingredients, like corn distillers solubles, condensed fermented corn extractives, phosphoric acid, and ammonium polyphosphate, have yet to be included in most other supplements!

Stop in soon We would like to demonstrate the dramatic results that Mol-Mix can bring to your herd in terms of performance and profits. We're not talking about something that will only add to your supplement costs we're talking about the bottom line

Summer is a good time to encourage reading

BY LYNN HERSHEY

NEWARK, Del. — One of the most peaceful summers of my life occurred when my exuberant son was seven — all the sweeter because it was so unexpected.

Chris never walked if he could run, never talked if he could shout, never stood still if he could jump up an down -- indoors or out. So I had mentally prepared myself for constant commotion in a vibrating house after school was over for the year.

I prayed that the summer would be rain-less, and that my patience would hold up. But on Chris' first day of vacation the house was so quiet I wondered if something was wrong, and tiptoed into his room. Sure enough, there he was lying on his bed. Not sick, however. He was reading.

It turned out to be a very rainy summer, which didn't matter a bit because Chris had discovered the thrill of reading on his own, and was insatiable. When he couldn't whoop it up outdoors, he was in his room engrossed in a book. You wouldn't believe how quiet the house was.

In a scrapbook I still have the record of the books he read that summer, written in his painstaking scrawl. There were 46 of them. True, none was a lengthy as War and Peace, but the list was impressive nevertheless.

As a writer and a lover of language, perhaps I can take some of the credit for Chris' enduring passion for books. We started reading together long before he could walk, and this continued to be a favorite daily pastime even after he could read himself.

Trips to the library were routine. As time went on we collected books about art and nature as well as volumes of prose, poetry, biography and history.

Eventually I introduced him to Dickens, Hemingway, Tolkein, Jack London, Will James, all my favorites. He's since introduced me to some of his. From the beginning it's been a two-way street with pleasure and rich memories on both sides.

Child development specialist Patricia Nelson belives there is probably no more important activity between parents and young children than reading together. Even babies can enjoy looking at picture books and hearing the sounds and rhythms of words.

Because reading as a lifetime habit is so important, parents should select those first books thoughtfully. They need not be expensive, but they should be honest and well-written, with quality illustrations.

"Wholesome, good quality nourishment is as important for the mind as for the body," says Nelson.

Toddlers are at the center of their small world, so they love books about people they can relate to — themselves, their parents and friends. They are just learning to use words, so repetition, rhyme and uncomplicated sentences help them grasp the concept of language.

"Books should reflect the toddler's actual surroundings," says Nelson. Farm children have trouble grasping life in a two-story house in the suburbs. Not all children live with two parents. A black toddler may not relate at all to illustrations of white children with blonde hair.

Fairy tales, however well-loved, may be too stimulating, even frightening, for very young children who easily confuse the real with the imaginary. On the other hand, brief stories about everyday objects, people and events are satisfying and reassuring, and provide a foundation for a later appreciation of fantasy.

Remeber too that attitudes about oneself and about other people are formed early, reminds Nelson. Parents should be sure books are fair in their portrayal of both sexes and different racial and ethnic groups. Even picture books for babies can suggest stereotypes.

Parents who are unsure about choosing books will find librarians very helpful. They'll also discover that the more books they examine, the more readily they'll spot those that are shoddy.

Reading is one of life's enduring delights. When children learn to love books early, that love affair will likely be permanent. Just ask Chris.

VILSMEIER AUCTION CO., INC.

How does behavior modification work

LANCASTER — What is behavior modification? How does it work; and what are some behavior modification approaches to diet?

Those questions were among the many nutrition-related subjects sent to Ask a Dietitian, a cooperative National Nutrition Month project sponsored by the Central PA. Dietetic Association and the Lancaster Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Heart Association. Here are a few of the questions:

I hear so much about behavior modification and its use in diet. How does behavior modification work to help someone lose weight?

ANSWER: Behavior modification is the process of changing the way we eat, not just what we eat. In a behavior modification program, suggestions are made on how to identify the emotional states that casue you to eat more, how to know when you are experiencing "real" and "imagined" hunger, how you can avoid the temptations of eating between meals, and how to eat less.

The behavior modification approach to diet is a responsible way to learn new eating habits that can last a lifetime. This is a far better way to lose weight, and keep it off, than crash diets and fad diets that usually only produce temporary results.

I have tried dozens of diets, but is seems that my weight loss only lasts a little while, and then I end up weighing more! Help!

ANSWER. Millions of people experience the same problem because they have not gotten to the heart of why they are overweight. The fact is that most of us eat more calories than our physical activity burns up. Dieting is only successful if you choose a diet that you can live with the rest of your life. It is better to go on a diet which results in gradual weight reduction instead of a crash diet which will allow rapid weight loss only to be followed by an equally rapid return of the overweight state. Ideally, meals should be composed of small portions of a wide variety of foods, including meats, poultry, fish, fresh fruits and vegetables, whole grain breads and cereals and low-fat dairy products. Behavior modification programs may help you to learn what triggers your desire to eat so that you can cope with it more successfully. Don't forget that an increase in physical activity is a good way to use up extra calories.

What's your question? Send it, along with a stamped, self-addressed envelope, to Ask a Dietitian; American Heart Association, Lancaster Pennsylvania Chapter P.O. Box 3026, Lancaster, Pa. 17603.

Farmers warned about sales

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Another warning to farmers about pesticide telephone salesmen is being sounded by the Maryland Department of Agriculture's David Shriver who says his counterparts in Virginia have alerted him to a problem which has been happening on that state's portion of the Eastern Shore.

Shriver, Chief of MDA's Pesticide Applicator Law Section, says the latest concern stems from efforts by telephone salesmen who try to sell an apparent bargain herbicide to farmers and nurserymen.

He says, "The key to the problem, and what farmers should watch out for, is the fact that the material comes in a very diluted form when delivered, instead of the concentrated form the buyer thinks he is purchasing. Therefore, the bargain aspect disappears and it's no savings at all."

"The best advice is to beware of telephone calls from strangers offering deals and fancy claims," Shriver concluded. "Buy from known dealers and firms and be sure to check out all the facts before buying any pesticide."

PURINA

HIGH OCTANE COW CHOW 36

THE DAIRY SUPPLEMENT WITH

WHAT GIVES PURINA Hi-O COW CHOW 36 IT'S "MILK POWER"?

Purina Dairy scientists have produced many outstanding Dairy rations through the years, but none offer a greater milk-making potential than Hi-O Cow Chow 36. This "super performing" supplement contains 36% protein. When mixed with grains according to Purina Research approved formulas it produces a "super" energy milking ration.

It is the unique scientific blending of a carefully calculated balance of proteins, minerals, vitamins and extra high energy milk-making ingredients that provides Hi-O Cow Chow 36 with its unusual power to produce extra milk.

Use Hi-O Cow Chow 36 for on-the-farm mixing or let your Purina dealer Check-R-Mix a Purina milking ration for you containing Hi-O Cow Chow 36. He has specific formulas to make a quality milking ration with the right protein level to fit your roughages and your herd.

Records show Hi-O Concentrate 36 not only increases milk production, but dairymen report significant increase in fat test.
